Waterland 'Arrogance And Bluff'

HOPE (CP) — Forestry Minister Tom Waterland was accused of "operating on arrogance and bluff" after a two-hour public meeting Friday on the controversial spraying program to combat western budworm in the Fraser Canyon.

Tom Davis of Hope, one of 100 persons at the meeting, asked the minister if he was prepared to hold a plebiscite on whether chemical sprays should be used in the area.

Waterland said the decision would be made on scientific evidence and not emotionalism, adding that it will depend on the proliferation of the budworm when site tests are taken in late May or early June.

The minister stressed that the consensus of scientific evidence is that the chemicals orethene and sevin-4-oil are safe if properly used and said he had been assured the chemicals last only three to four days at strength, with no trace left within 30 days.

But Waterland had to retract his earlier assurances that orthene is on the permanent registry of the federal agriculture department.

Merriam Doucet, of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, insisted the chemical has only a temporary registry for use in forests and Dr. Roy Shepherd, a forest entomologist, confirmed her statement.

One man at the meeting asked why the government had spent $396 on a full-age advertisement in the local newspaper, giving its side of the story about the proposed spraying.

The man said residents want equal time and money to present the views of their experts.

The minister said if anyone can provide technical knowledge not already considered by the scientists, he would ensure it would be properly evaluated.

He told the meeting the spray problem could be stopped at any time if it could definitely be proved the chemicals are harmful to health.

Doucet said it has been found that orthene breaks down into a chemical for a time called monotor-4, which is 46 times more toxic than the original orthene.

She also said carbaryl in sevin-4-oil has produced birth defects in five different species of mammals.

Rivulets, weather and downdraft from helicopter rotor blades during spray application all make it impossible to confine the chemicals to specific sites.

Waterland said the purpose of the spray is to protect the environment, as well as the economy of the region. He said if the budworm is left untreated there is a good chance it would destroy the timber that is now providing a $3.5-million payroll to families in the canyon.

John Ingwersen of Yale later told the minister: "You are operating on arrogance and bluff. You have given no answers to our questions."

DOGS KILL 4 DEER

At least three fawns and a buck have been killed by dogs at Fort Rodd Hill national park in the past two weeks, a commissioner working there said today.

Luther Johnson said there are two dogs there who have been running deer for two years and calls to animal protection officers have produced no action.

SECRET GOV'T REPORT

Farm Market Boards Hiking Food Costs

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A confidential government document, obtained by The Montreal Star, raises devastating questions about farm marketing boards and suggests they are forcing up food prices while damaging the competitiveness of Canadian agriculture.

The document, prepared by the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, calls for "a major research effort into the effects of government regulation on market competition in selected agricultural industries."

It recommends that the study start with commodities now produced under a federal or provincial supply management program — chicken, turkey, eggs and dairy products.

Dated Feb. 21, 1977, the paper was apparently presented at a private seminar on agriculture competition in Ottawa, March 20.

It has been carefully shielded from the public.

The document states that the bureau of competition policy "has a clearly defined responsibility" to review the policies of some marketing boards and to report its findings to the government, the agribusiness community and the public.

The 60-page document offers substantial evidence that:

—Consumers are being forced to pay extraordinarily high prices for some products, because of the activities of marketing boards;

—Rather than protecting the family farm, marketing boards may be hastening its demise;

—Production of some commodities has become seriously "balkanized" in Canada;

—Efforts to control the supply of products reaching the market have created other costly distortions in the agriculture industry.

As one example, it notes that during the second week of January average retail prices for fresh broiler chicken in Vancouver was $1.09 a pound compared with 63 cents in Toronto.

"This represents an average price differential of 46 cents per pound, or 73 per cent, between the two markets.

"When the lowest quoted retail prices were compared, the spread widened to 62 cents per pound — a differential of greater than 130 per cent," the paper states.

It adds that the situation is not unique to British Columbia.

"Unexplained price differentials continue to exist between other provinces and, in many regions, between Canada and the United States," it says.

"Only in Ontario and, to a lesser extent, Quebec do (broiler) prices appear to have been under any significant and consistent downward pressure from U.S. imports," the document states.

It adds that provincial marketing boards are able to limit outside competition either as a result of marketing board regulations or voluntary "gentlemen's agreements" on the part of boards or processors.

"One of the factors contributing to the 'stability' of the B.C. market has been Import Order No. 1, a regulation passed in August, 1970, by the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board prohibiting the sale of 'out-of-province' product without prior Board approval," the paper says.

It adds that supply management programs operating under federal jurisdiction also include provision for restrictive quotas on competing imports — thus raising prices to consumers.

A proposal is currently under consideration to establish a similar program for broiler chickens, and the federal department of agriculture is also reviewing "the feasibility of a supply management program for the beef industry."

The confidential document notes that there is growing public concern regarding the effect of government regulation on competition in the marketplace — and it lists 27

WOMAN GETS HER MONEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Surrey woman, who took legal action against Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm after his department's refusal to increase her welfare benefits, will get more money.

David Mossop, lawyer for Mohini O'Toole, said Friday the welfare department has agreed to pay O'Toole $50 a month for the first four months of this year, but not for December, 1976.

O'Toole claimed that she was entitled to $50 a month more than the $371.25 a month she was receiving. The appeal board upheld her claim that families of handicapped persons are entitled to be treated like single-parent families.

The government still plans to challenge the appeal.

Carter Backs Port Angeles Pipelines

Times News Services

SEATTLE — President Carter will call for construction of either the Northern Tier pipeline from Port Angeles or a trans-Canada pipeline from Kitimat, or both, depending on Canada's reaction.

A copyrighted story in the Ridder Newspapers said Carter's recommendation will be included in his energy message to Congress on Wednesday.

Northern Tier's proposal calls for construction of an oil tanker superport at Port Angeles and a new 1,500-mile pipeline from Puget Sound to Clearbrook, Minn.

Residents of Port Angeles fiercely oppose the plan.

FIVE FIRES SET IN CITY

Five fires that broke out in a half-hour period late Friday night were deliberately set, Victoria fire officials said today.

The fires, three set in garbage cans, one in an awning and the fifth at a demolition site, were quickly extinguished and caused little damage.

EDMONTON (CP) — Six senior officials with the Indian affairs department were back in their 27th-floor offices in the CN Tower today after being placed in nearby basement quarters on Tuesday. See Story on Page 31.

Cars Need Repairs

CALGARY (CP) — A six-week Alberta-wide RCMP campaign has revealed one in every 15 cars on the road needs repair. A policespokesman said RCMP manned 630 check points during February and March, stopping more than 15 000 vehicles and charging 270 persons for having faulty equipment.

Flooded Town Blasts Ice Dam

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — Blasters dynamited the Athabasca River with a 600-pound charge Friday to break up a 12-foot thick ice jam and stop flooding in this Athabasca oil-sands boom town.

Water fell four feet overnight, Bill Szabon, department of environment engineer, said this morning.

"But it is not like Moses dividing the Red Sea — it will take a little time before things are back to normal, Szabon said..

This community of 18,000 in northeastern Alberta remained in a state of emergency as police and disaster service officials watched the water mark.

About 1,500 people were evacuated when flood waters spilled into a 60-square block area in the northeastern section of the town, much of it a mobile home site.

Government officials estimated over-all damage at between $3 and $4 million.

Chuck Knight, town administrator, said the flood was caused by the breakup of the Athabasca River above the town Thursday. Ice stopped the downstream flow and the water backed up the Clearwater River and caused flooding.

Harley Bricker, town disaster services volunteer coordinator, said the river rose nine inches an hour for about 11 hours at one point.

"We had to get sand bags from the Great Canadian Oil Sands plant and more from Edmonton to try and block off the flood waters," he said. "Heavy equipment operators and trucks worked all night bringing gravel from a pit to form a dyke."

RCMP Insp. James Quin said the taverns and the liquor store were closed Thursday night to prevent fights and other incidents and enable officers to concentrate on the emergency.

About 100 families slept in arenas, gymnasiums, Keyano College, and a construction camp, eating their meals in schools.

MURDER SEARCH

PORT ALBERNI — RCMP today launched an intensive search for the killer of a 12-year-old girl whose body was found near here Friday.

Police said the body of Carolyn Lee, daughter of a Port Alberni restaurant owner, was discovered at 5 p.m. by searchers combing a wooded area a mile west of the city limits.

Police would not say how the girl died.

Police do not know if she was picked up or where she went. The dance studio is only three blocks away from her home.

Her parents reported her missing early that night and a search was started.

School Tax Up One Mill

Education Minister Pat McGeer announced Friday the provincial average mill rate for school taxes this year will increase to 47.5 mills from 46.5 for 1976.

The mill rate is the multiple used in calculating municipal taxes once the assessment levels have been set. Actual mill rates for each district will vary.

McGeer said in a news release the mill rate consists of a basic levy of 37.5 mills set by the government to cover the school district share of the basic education program.

In addition, a mill rate is calculated for each district to cover operating costs over and above the basic education program, debt and capital charges, and the cost of operating community colleges in those districts where it is applicable, he said.

The minister said the 47.5 mills is predicated on an over-all increase in total school district budgets of 9.5 per cent above 1976. School boards have until May 1 to establish a final mill rate and to make any reductions in their budget — something which would result in a decrease of the rate.

Dr. McGeer said that the increase for this year came about mainly because of large surpluses in 1976 of more than $23 million.

He also announced the current ministerial estimates contain $3.7 million for special aid to 13 school districts in order to assist districts which have rapidly increasing enrolments and to bring excessive mill rates in districts with low assessed values into line with provincial ranges.

The minister also said that the average cost of the 14 community colleges to the 68 participating school districts will be 1.62 mills.

Skiers Frozen To Death

Times News Services

Searchers found the bodies of five West German skiers today frozen to death in a snowstorm which struck the resort region of Zermatt, Switzerland, near the Italian border.

Rescue officials identified them as vacationers who had been missing since setting out on a skiing trip Friday morning. A helicopter brought the bodies down to Zermatt, below the 14,326-foot Matterhorn peak.

The body of another West German victim of the blizzards ranging in the Valais Alps during the last few days was brought down to the valley today.

Shortly after dawn today helicopters rescued 10 skiers who had spent two days and nights sheltering from storms in igloos they made for themselves out of snow after being marooned at 9,000 feet in a nearby region.

The 10 lost their skis in an avalanche on the Chermontane Pass and were trapped while seven companions went for help. The igloos protected them against cold and fatigue, but several were suffering from frostbite and one had to be taken to hospital.

In Vienna, an avalanche today roared down on a construction site of the Arlberg mountain road tunnel, killed one worker and cut off an undetermined number of other workers from the outside world, police said.

The accident occurred on a remote site at an altitude of 6,600 feet on the Arlberg mountain where a road tunnel is being constructed.

Plain White Wrapper Sweeps French Stores

By PAUL WEBSTER
Manchester Guardian

PARIS — After a year's trial and controversy, the French have taken such a liking to products with no brand name that the experiment has spread to most of the big supermarket chains.

Just a year ago the leading French supermarket chain Carrefour was attacked by other shopping chains, advertising groups and manufacturers for starting a marketing campaign that deliberately set out to undermine the brand image.

Its "free products" made by well-known manufacturers were sold in plain white wrappers with little more information than the name of what was inside, such as biscuits or coffee, and miniscule type describing the ingredients.

Although it was claimed the product's quality was as good as any on the market the price was as much as a third less than its branded rival.

The main attack came from big food companies like Perrier, which said that damaging the brand name would help the cause of the Communists and Socialists in France and that wrapping products in white paper was following the example of Moscow and Peking.

Advertising companies called for a boycott of the supermarket chain, although several worked secretly on the company's huge "free product" campaign using the symbol of an albatross flying in a blue sky.

Although the immediate effect was to reduce prices, consumer groups refused to endorse the initiative feeling that it was a "loss leader" campaign, which would fizzle out. Since then at least two Carrefour no-name products have been awarded "best buy" status by consumer magazines.

The original 50 no-brand products have been doubled and manufacturers who shunned Carrefour a year ago have agreed to package their goods in plain wrappers without direct supporting advertising. This is partly because Carrefour is now heading off a challenge from other shopping chains but it is also seen to be good business which sells brand products as well.

When competing directly against brand names, Carrefour claims it takes an average of 40 per cent of sales. For some products it is much higher. No-name liquid detergent accounts for 69 per cent of business with other high scores being made by breakfast foods, jam and shampoos.

Carrefour's claim that prices can be cut to the bone by dropping brand advertising and fancy packaging are supported by other supermarkets, some of whom are undercutting Carrefour. Six of its main rivals now have a range of goods that plagiarize the Carrefour idea.

The reason that some seem to be able to sell the same products from the same manufacturer at below the Carrefour prices is almost certainly due to their not launching major advertising campaigns to bring them to light.

Carrefour is marking the anniversary of its "revolution" with another huge promotion aimed at doubling the number of no-brand products by direct consultation by what it calls "a new sort of customer" who is no longer influenced by advertising.

Top Brass at Ford Triples Pay

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co., which tripled its profits last year, tripled the wages of chairman Henry Ford and president Lee Iacocca to a record $970,000 each in 1976 — the highest in U.S. business.

The disclosure Friday by the No. 2 auto-maker in the U.S. followed word from General Motors Corp. that chairman Thomas Murphy, who guided the No. 1 U.S. automaker to record profits and sales in 1976, was paid $950,000 in salary and bonuses.

Murphy's pay represents a 65-per-cent raise from 1975, when he received $575,000.

The executives' pay was disclosed in proxy statements announcing the firms' annual shareholder meetings next month.

Six other senior GM officers received between $760,000 and $797,500 in pay last year, while four other Ford executives were paid between $590,000 and $781,000.

A recent Business Week survey, completed prior to the pay disclosures Friday, shows that Harold Geneen, chairman of International Telephone Telegraph Corp., had been listed as the top salaried executive of 1976 with total pay of $846,398. But that figure was topped Friday by five auto executives.

Auto executive salaries plunged in 1974 and 1975 when an industry recession caused elimination or reduction of bonuses. But last year was a record year for auto profits, topping the previous high set in 1973.

GM earned $2.9 billion in 1976 — more than double its 1975 earnings — on sales of $47.2 billion. Ford had profits of $983 million — up from $323 million in 1975 — on sales of $29 billion.

Henry Ford and Oacocca each received $360,000 in salary and $610,000 in bonuses.

Murphy's compnsation — $325,000 in salary and $625,000 in bonuses — topped GM's previous high executive wage of $923,000 paid in 1973 to then-chairman Richard Gerstenberg.

VSE BOSS CLEARED IN GRIZZLY PROBE

A top-level investigation into the conduct of David Huberman, a Vancouver Stock Exchange governor, has failed to find any evidence of wrongdoing, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Friday.

Mair said that recent testimony before the Grizzly Valley pipeline inquiry suggested a possible conflict of interest by Huberman, a well-known corporate lawyer.

"The suggestion was repeated in the legislature as an allegation by the former attorney-general Alex Macdonald," said Mair, "and I took the question as notice until the superintendent of brokers had looked into thhe matter.

"He has now done so and I am pleased to say that there is no evidence whatsoever of any impropriety by Mr. Huberman."

The minister told reporters that all allegations were totally groundless and that the Mair said he would not comment on any other aspect of the Grizzly valley inquiry, which resumes April 25 in Vancouver.

Woodworkers' Union Says No To Strike Ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Phillips, British Columbia's minister of economics, suggested Friday management and labor devise an agreement whereby strikes would be banned for the next five years in forestry industries.

Spokesmen for the International Woodworkers of America dismissed the suggestion. The union is seeking a one-year agreement in negotiations to begin Monday.

Phillips told the annual meeting of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. (COFI) that workers should be told there cannot be gain without some pain.

Too many groups in B.C. have their hands out, he said, and unless the province regains a sense of direction there is the danger of "sinking into a sea of socialism."

Phillips said that when he goes to Japan later this year he hopes to tell the Japanese there is a good outlook for a stable, guaranteed supply.

H. Edward Manning, a vice-president of Richmond Plywood Corp. Ltd., told the meeting high interest rates and existing tax structures pose a combined threat to the housing segment of the construction industry in Canada.

If this continues, he warned, housing construction may slow down and forestry industries will also be affected.

Manning, chairman of COFI's product promotion committee, said one of the council's prime objectives this year is to enhance the market in Japan. Its promotional budget there has been doubled to $1 million for 1977 and 14 council representatives will be working in Japan by the end of the year.

H. A. Fierst, the council's Washington representative, said B.C. forest product manufacturers should have a good year with the United States market, with 1.8 million housing starts expected in both 1977 and 1978.

Robert B. Fisher has been elected COFI chairman to succeed Tom Rust. Fisher is executive vice-president of L and K Lumber (North Shore) Ltd., of North Vancouver.

TRAILER LOTS FOR VICTIMS

Acting house minister Alex Fraser, said Friday that families left homeless by a recent condominium fire in Port Hardy will be offered 60-year leases at the provincially-owned Cedar Heights mobile home park there.

Fraser said the lots, previously offered for sale, are fully serviced and are being made available at the request of the municipality.

Marketing Boards Push Costs?

pages of documentation to support the statement.

The document also says that, contrary to claims by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan that marketing boards protect the small producer, "evidence suggests that marketing board with substantial price-setting powers may actually hasten the demise of the family farm as more integrated firms expand in an attempt to increase market power and-or decrease operating costs."

It quotes a recent report commissioned by the Quebec Egg Producers Association which showed the number of egg producers in the province had declined from more than 3,000 in 1966 to about 350 in 1975.

The Consumer and Corporate Affairs document also quotes evidence that in Ontario the number of chicken producers shrunk from 834 in 1966 to 611 in 1975.

"It is an interesting paradox," the document adds, "that supply (management) policies aimed at preserving producer independence through increasing the profitability and market power of the producing sector may, in the long run, pose the greatest threat to the survival of the family farm."

Costs of quotas — the right to produce and sell product through marketing boards — adds substantially to production costs, the report says.

The right to produce chicken in Ontario today is worth between $4 and $7 per bird. At an average of $5.50 per head, a farmer wishing to enter the industry at what is said to be the minimum efficient family farm level (50,000 birds per cycle) would have to pay $275,000 strictly for the right to produce broiler chickens — over and above the cost of buildings, equipment and land.

"Estimates of quota values of $450 per case for egg production and 15 cents per pound for turkey production are indicative of the success of marketing boards in increasing returns to producers," the paper states.

Using the example of the broiler chicken industry, a new producer would have to receive an additional $27,500 per year, over and above production costs, simply to cover financial carrying charges of 10 per cent a year on his quota investment.

The report also claims that the effects of supply management systems on long-term industry efficiency merits serious consideration.

"Escalating quota values result in a capital intensive producing sector with decreased efficiency and increased costs.

"In such instances, the competitive position of the Canadian industry vis-a-vis the United States is eroded, and further market protection, in the form of import barriers, become necessary," the report states.

Commenting on the growth of supply management through marketing boards, the paper says: "We have traded the old uncertainty of market forces for the new uncertainty of market regulation. The former was at least manageable, based on principles of risk management in the free market, the latter is not.

"As marketing board policies are increasingly dictated by political expediency, supply mangement raised the uninsurable risks . . ."

The paper also claims that market insulation tends to spread.

In 1974, import controls were implemented at the request of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency on table eggs. At present, import restrictions apply, not only to table eggs, but to breaker eggs, egg powder and frozen and liquid processed eggs in any form.

Where production quotas must be purchased by producers there are financing problems that can lead to more corporate control over the industry.

Lending institutions may hesitate to fully capitalize quota values — which places the new grower in the position of having to borrow a substantial amount from feed companies and/or processors.

This, in addition to paying higher interest rates, can lead to the producer having to purchase inputs or process product through the lending company or its subsidiaries.

The document states that "if government regulation aimed at increasing the effectiveness of agricultural production is reducing the ability of the industry to compete efficiently in domestic and international markets, then a serious re-evaluation of existing policies is obviously required."

However, it predicts "considerable resistance" on the part of some groups as a result of the proposed research inquiry.

Tenants Seek Eviction ... Of Hoards of Mice

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

"I sit here all night and I'm petrified," says Jean Johnson, covering her eyes with both hands.

"They don't bother me so much," he says, "but they really terrify her."

What's on Mrs. Johnson's nerves, she explains, is not vandals, not noisy neighbors, but mice — lots and lots of mice.

Mice that scurry across the floor, mice that peek at you from behind table legs and, as of Thursday night, mice that leap out of kitchen cupboards.

"Last night really took the cake," said Jean, Friday. "I opened up a cupboard and one jumped right at me. I went back to my girlfriend's apartment and just about fainted."

It's got so bad lately, she says, that now she hardly ever goes in the apartment when her husband's not there, and he works nights.

The mice don't scare Bob, but he hates them every bit as much as his wife does, and he's determined to get rid of them.

So far he hasn't had much luck, and if somebody could invent a better mouse trap he'd be one of the first beating a path to his door.

★ ★ ★

Bob's been setting a couple of spring-loaded traps baited with everything from cheese to peanut butter ("I'll try anything!") but so far he's managed to knock off only three of the critters.

He's tried complaining to his landlord, the health board and the rentalsman, but so far he's got nowhere.

But Bob says he hasn't given up yet, and his next move will be to try and organize his fellow tenants in a protest meant to rouse his landlord, Greenbank Designs Contracts Division Ltd., to action.

"We'll pay our rent to the rentalsman who'll withhold it until the landlord does something," said Bob. "OK, I might get kicked out but . . ."

"I ain't moving," interrupts his wife.

"No," agrees Bob, "we want the mice kicked out."

He adds that, "It wouldn't be so bad if they were paying half the rent."

Building superintendent Bruce Ferguson said, however, that he's got no sympathy for the Johnsons.

"They're the only ones that have ever complained," he said. "If they've got mice they brought them in themselves in packing crates."

So he doesn't believe there's a swarm of mice in the building?

"That's a farce ... there's only three," he said.

★ ★ ★

But whatever Ferguson says, Mrs. Johnson thinks there are mice in the building, and lots of them.

"They'll start sticking their noses out about 10:30 tonight," she said, casting an apprehensive glance towards a tiny mousehole near the bathroom door.

Woods Waste? IWA Agrees

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, says he agrees with Forests Minister Tom Waterland that the forest industry is guilty of "criminal luxury" in using high-quality logs for pulp.

"Waterland surprises me," Munro said Thursday. "I don't disagree with anything he says."

The minister warned the forest industry Thursday he expects big changes in how it conducts itself and charged that the province was not being properly served by an industry that "butchers" valuable timber in antiquated mills he described as "dinosaurs."

Waterland promised a new forest act by next spring which will contain legislation to ignore companies to utilize timber efficiently.

Munro said the people of British Columbia have "been getting the short end of the stick" for a long time, adding that IWA members have "known for years that quality saw logs have been ground into pulp."

He said he knows of some efficient small saw mills that have had to shut down because they can't get an adequate supply of logs while major corporations feed the needed logs into their pulp operations.

However, a spokesman for the Canadian Paperworkers Union said the union has encountered no misuse of saw logs, except possibly in some cases where a pulp mill is adjacent to a saw mill.

POLITICAL PARTIES ALL SHOW PROFIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for British Columbia's four major political parties say their organizations are financially solvent.

Ken Kiernan, treasurer of the Social Credit Party, said more than $40,000 was gathered from two recent $100-a-plate dinners and more fund-raising affairs are planned by the government party.

"At our last convention we were broke, but all our bills were paid," Kiernan said.

"Now we've climbed out of that. We are still going to have to continue raising money to keep in the black."

Joyce Nash, assistant provincial secretary for the New Democratic Party, said the party is in good financial shape, with local dinner-dance parties providing most of the organization's funds.

Joan Gillanders, vice-president of the provincial Progressive Conservative Party, said the financial picture isn't bright, but the party "is viable and operating."

An upcoming $100-a-plate dinner featuring American conservative William Buckley Jr. should raise about $40,000 she said.

Rick Horne, finance chairman for the Liberal Party, said the party is holding a province-wide fund-raising drive this month to raise an anticipated $100,000.

Soviet Weapons Aid Ethiopia

Washington Post

ADDIS ABABA — The Soviet Union has begun shipping tanks and other heavy arms to Ethiopia under a secret military assistance agreement signed last December, according to Arab and Western diplomatic sources here. The aid could amount to more than $100 million in military equipment, the sources said.

The arrival of the Soviet arms in Ethiopia marks the end of an era stretching back for more than 20 years during which the United States exclusively provided virtually all of this formerly pro-Western nation's military needs from light arms to tanks, planes and ships.

At the same time, the Soviet decision to begin arming Ethiopia is a daring gamble by Moscow, for it could well alienate the neighboring country of Somalia, where the Soviets have their largest military and economic investment anywhere in black Africa.

Somalia and Ethiopia have been sworn enemies for more than a decade now because of a Somali claim to this country's eastern Ogaden Region. In addition, the two neighboring Marxist governments are at loggerheads over the future of the French Territory of the Afars and Issas that lies between them and is scheduled to become independent in June.

Meanwhile, President Carter has approved the sale of six C130 military transport planes to Sudan, inaugurating a U.S. supply relationship with a strategic African country once linked to the Soviet Union.

The aircraft, costing about $50 million, are expected to be paid for by Saudi Arabia, which has helped to arrange and finance a switch from Soviet to U.S. military relationships by several other countries in the Middle East and Africa.

Fairer City Taxes Eyed for Industry

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria's court of revision on business tax assessments has complained that the methods used by B.C. Assessment Authority staff to asses industrial properties are "theoretical and arbitrary," and do not reflect the properties' true values.

The panel expresses its concern in a report to city council, in which it suggests the city approach the assessment authority with a view to adopting a fairer formula for determining industrial plants' assessments.

In the case of normal commercial premises, such as stores and offices, the basis for calculation is the actual rental paid or, if the property is not a rented one, the figure which a hypothetical tenant would pay a hypothetical landlord in the light of prevailing economic conditions.

But in assessing industrial properties the authority's assesors have adopted a so-called economic approach, to determine what a prudent investor would expect as a reasonable annual return on capital invested in land and buildings.

Under this formula, the yield was established at seven per cent on the land and 10 per cent on the structures.

In its report to council, the court of revision says this economic approach is "too theoretical and arbitrary as an equitable method of determining gross rental value as defined by statute."

Among other objections, it says the formula does not reflect the current return on investment in industry generally, nor does it have any real relevance to performance in individual industries.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, a member of the assessment review panel, said Friday he was "rather horrified" when he first heard the fictional investment return figures which are the basis of the assessors' economic approach.

"There are not too many people making that kind of return who are in business today," he said. "The average would be closer to a three or four per cent net return."

McKenzie claimed another flaw in the formula is that it takes no account of the advantages of technological change.

A long-established plant such as B.C. Forest Products' Victoria operation, for example, is assessed by the size of site and buildings, whereas if the plant were being started from scratch today it would achieve far greater productivity from a much small operation.

McKenzie said some industrial firms which appeared before the panel were appealing assessment increases as high as 260 per cent.

He said the panel instructed the assessors to factor all these increases downward to 84 per cent, which was the average over-all increase for industry generally.

A complete reassessment of all business properties in the city — about 3,500 in all — was undertaken by the B.C. Assessment Authority earlier this year.

Aware that there would be many firms hit by heavy assessment increases, council recently decided to lower the city's business rate from five per cent to four per cent.

A bylaw authorizing the changes was introduced and given first readings on Thursday.

U.K.-U.S. Flights May Halt

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There is a "realistic" possibility all commercial flights between the United States and Britain could stop this summer if the two nations fail to sign a new air treaty by June 22, U.S. transportation secretary Brock Adams said Friday.

Adams did not elaborate but said "We have made an offer on routes and capacities and (the British) have not replied."

Britain previously rejected a 31-year-old treaty between the two countries, wanting more than its one-third share of the air traffic between this country and Britain.

Adams made the assertion at a press conference called to release a preliminary environmental impact statement on the issuance of noise rules for civil supersonic aircraft like the Concorde.

According to the statement, the noise generated by a worldwide fleet of 30 to 40 Concordes using 12 major U.S. airports could increase the number of people disturbed by noise around those airports by 55 per cent by 1987.

In releasing the statement, Adams emphasized that this assessment was included as a picture of the worst doueld picture of the worst situation that could develop if the Concorde were to continue to fly into American airports. Under the National Environmental Policy Act, Adams said, it is customary to report "best case and worst case projections." He said it is unlikely that so large a fleet of Concorde would ever be built.

The impact statement, filed in accordance with a U.S. district court order issued last year, is not "necessarily the one on which any noise rules affecting the Concorde would be based, Adams said.

The supersonic aircraft will continue to fly into Dulles International airport here at least until September, when studies of the Concorde being conducted at the airport should be completed and analyzed.

Once that study is completed, Adams said, a final environmental impact statement will be written and public hearings held before any decision on the aircraft's future at U.S. airports will be made.

Adams called the Concorde an issue of "major domestic importance" and said he would consult President Carter before making a final decision.

Sewer Game Suspended

What started out five years ago as a practical plan for disposing of the sewage of southern Vancouver Island has become the liveliest political football to bounce around Greater Victoria for a long time. Play has been momentarily suspended and most of the players hope that when it is resumed the ball will be kicked out of bounds and remain there.

The issue which has exercised, even enraged, a growing number of citizens concerns a proposal to erect a large pumping station on the shore of Shoal Bay, a pleasant crescent of sand and shingle with views of Trial Island and the distant Olympic mountains. It is a place much favored by strollers and bird watchers, for many wildfowl rest or winter there.

The function of the station would be to push the sewage of Oak Bay and part of Saanich past Gonzales Hill to Clover Point where a pumping station is now being built. There it would merge with sewage from other parts of Victoria and be pumped far out to sea, hopefully to be seen no more.

All this was made quite clear in 1972 when the capital region board accepted the recommendations of a firm of consulting engineers. Few voices were raised against the proposals. Everyone acted as if the sewage would move itself over to Clover Point. Oak Bay dozed on as did their elected representatives, some of whom still sit on the municipal council.

It's quite possible their slumbers would have remained uninterrupted until a bulldozer turned up to begin work on the shoreline site selected at the east end of the bay. Fortunately a Victoria Times reporter grew curious about an apparently routine item of business at an Oak Bay council meeting and asked questions. The pumping station was about to materialize in all its ugliness.

The news galvanized the neighborhood. The rest of Victoria likes to think that Oak Bay is inseparable from its teacups, but here were residents organizing committees and protest meetings and even marching with placards beside the proposed site. They had good cause. The site turned out to have been left in trust to the municipality and therefore was untouchable.

Now a scramble began to find an alternative site. Each proposal provoked howls from the property owners it would adjoin. Then with exquisite irony — it must have been irony — the final choice appeared about to fall on the waterfront home of Richard Bower, publisher of The Daily Colonist (a morning paper) who had been active in the protest campaign. It was put forward almost as an afterthought and was the only residence suggested for transformation into a pumping station.

The Shoal Bay resistance group kept fighting. It discovered that in 1912 the residents of a seven-acre block of land which includes the Bower home had covenanted never to let their properties be used for other than residential purposes. The document was presented as a further legal obstacle last Wednesday to the capital region board. The board grasped the opportunity to shelve further additions to the system while it conferred with legal advisers.

It was not just the covenant that caused the juggernaut to grind to a halt. Last Sunday Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis let it be known in a telephone call from Toronto that his department queried the right of the capital region board under its letters patent to build a pumping station at Shoal Bay, or a connecting line from there to Clover Point.

Then, no doubt smiling at the discomfiture of his old friend Jim Campbell, the board chairman, he boarded a plane for three weeks' vacation in England. Campbell sourly pointed out that Curtis was chairman of the board at the time the project was approved. Perhaps the two of them could settle the issue with a duel on Trial Island when Curtis returns.

As if these two blows were not enough, Dr. Scott Wallace and Brian Smith, respectively MLA and mayor for Oak Bay, rose at Wednesday's meeting and hinted at independent legal action against the board. At the same time they urged that the present inadequate outfall at McMicking Point be extended into the strait.

This sensible suggestion would obviate the need for a pumping station at Shoal Bay and would save the costly pipeline from there to Clover Point. It would also fall within the terms of the letters patent which deal with outfalls at McMicking, Clover and Macaulay Points. Approval by the Pollution Control Board would be necessary, however.

In retrospect the saga has its comic aspects but it hasn't been funny for any of those involved. Whatever happens, considerable sums of public money have been frittered away, and we are no nearer a permanent solution to the problem of sewage disposal.

If there is a lesson to be learned it is that the public itself should read the small print of any municipal or capital region proposal which might affect any neighborhood. The men and women they have elected have not always done so. They should in future if they wish to avoid another eruption of voter displeasure like the one experienced in Oak Bay.

The whistle announcing resumption of play is unlikely to be heard until Hugh Curtis returns from his foreign travels.

For Vigorous Crops

Footnote to the Shoal Bay sewage controversy:

A local department store is advertising for sale 50 pounds of fertilizer at $5.99 a bag. The fertilizer is sold by the trade name Milorganite, and is manufactured from the municipal sewage of Milwaukee, Wisconsin on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Why is it the municipality of Milwaukee can ship the stuff 2,500 miles to Victoria and make money from its waste while we just throw it away, jetting our sewage daily into the Strait of Juan de Fuca?

At nearly 12 cents a pound retail, the Victoria region is dumping millions of dollars a year into the sea. The region wouldn't need outfalls, pumping stations or treatment plants with a scheme like Milwaukee's. And much of the product would be used locally, considering Victorians' intense interest in gardening.

We can see it now. "Care for Capital Crops with Victorganite, special active ingredient CRB added at no extra charge." Sprinkle on your spinach and onions, add a little controversy, stir in a few legal opinions — grows enormous crops of outrage, brouhaha, slang and insult.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

A Matter of Choice, Except for the Money

When the Bennett administration introduced legislation to provide financial support for independent schools on March 30 the government overturned a 112-year-old precedent in British Columbia.

Seven years before B.C. joined Confederation the Common Schools Act of the colony of Vancouver Island was explicit: educational institutions were to be conducted under strictly non-sectarian principles. In 1872 the province's Public Schools Act superseded colonial legislation but preserved secular principle.

Under former Premier W. A. C. Bennett independent schools received some financial aid for textbook purchases, but Social Credit remained adamantly opposed to funding religious or independent schools with taxpayers' money. Dave Barrett's NDP regime went a little further providing money for school busing and library privileges. And during the 1975 provincial election campaign Social Credit promised cash to cover operating grants, a campaign plank the government is now honoring.

But the government legislation goes much further than operating grants. Eligible independent schools would be able to apply for instructional support grants to pay teacher salaries. Another grant would permit a local school board to authorize government to pay a percentage of the per pupil operating cost.

While it should be emphasized that none of these measures are intended to set up a separate or parallel school system, they are bound to engender an emotional debate. Already the B.C. Teachers' Federation is expressing concern over the proposed legislation. And NDP leader David Barrett has called for a provincial referendum on the issue, an alternative provided under the Provincial Elections Act.

When the legislature reconvenes sometime in June the Independent Schools Support Act is bound to be the focus of much debate. Yet it is to the credit of the NDP and the BCTF that they have couched their opposition in such a statesmanlike manner.

This is an extremely delicate issue which has torn Canada before, as the Manitoba Schools Act of 1870 shows in our history books. As Barrett said in his Vancouver press conference Friday, "It is imperative that all legislators pause in their labors and recognize that they are now dealing with an issue which has been fundamentally beyond partisan political disputes of the day throughout the history of British Columbia."

Unfortunately, what was an article of faith 100 years ago is a political issue today. It can't help be political when the government proposes such legislation and the official opposition calls for a referendum on the proposal. In a sense the call for a referendum is a red herring, a neat way of taking the NDP off the hook. If the official opposition opposed the bill outright it could lose many votes from Catholic, Chinese and other religious minorites. At the same time it is hard to fault Barrett for taking this route on an issue that has so many emotional overtones, and a potential for dividing the province along religious and class lines.

If in fact a referendum were held, though, the campaign could raise all the bitterness the NDP seeks to avoid. Nor does a referendum seem likely from the government's point of view. With 540,000 public school children compared with 23,000 independent school children, it would probably fail.

Meanwhile, everybody pussyfoots around this important issue for fear of bringing the bigots out of the woodwork.

British Columbia and Manitoba are the only two Canadian provinces that don't incorporate some type of aid to independent schools. In Alberta, for example, a separate Catholic school board exists. Quebec has its Protestant school boards which even Rene Levesque honors.

The question in B.C. today is not "freedom of choice." That already exists. At bottom we must ask ourselves whether public funds should be used to subsidize education for a small minority.

In a pluralistic democratic society there are arguments for such a course. Eight of our sister provinces have enacted analogous legislation to what B.C. proposes. But more than 100 years ago our forebears decided against funding independent schools. Are we to reopen this musty issue a century later because of an articulate and well-organized lobby by a small minority?

So many of our Canadian problems today result from regional, cultural and religious differences. It seems foolish to foster new categories of education when it is imperative to build a cohesive democratic nation.

Many private schools in B.C. offer scholarships and bursaries in tune with these egalitarian times. For example, at Shawnigan Lake boys school 90 of the 232 students are receiving some type of assistance through scholarships and bursaries. And people have a right to provide their children with any kind of religious education they wish. But these choices are individual, and should not be subsidized by the state which lays out close to $1 billion annually for a publicly supported educational system.

Better to pour the indeterminate funds that would go to independent schools under this legislation into an ailing public system. Private education should be paid for privately. — G.R.O.

Salient Facts

I have no intention of replying to your correspondent M. P. Paine (Naked Power) in the same vein as, in my view, confrontation either between individuals or nations serves no purpose.

Your correspondent seems to forget some very salient facts:

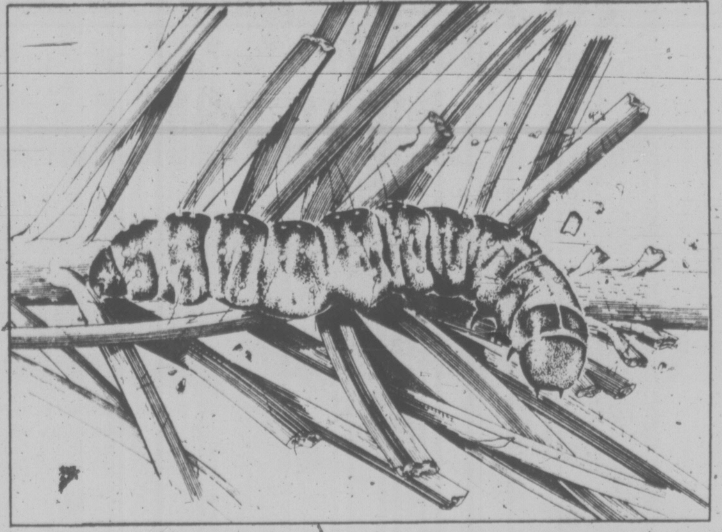
Russia is a nation of some 250 million and I cannot believe that her sacrifices in the last war were made by a small part of the nation at the point of a gun. In addition whether Mr. Paine likes it or not Russia is a super power.

Russia has the nuclear capability of destroying the world and as I view the peace of the world as the first objective of all sane humanity I do not believe that letters, such as that submitted by your correspondent, helps the peace of the world. The days of conventional wars are past and I connot accept the premise that the importance of any ideology is worth the destruction of the world as we know it. As an active participant in the infantry in the First World War, I know something about the "glories of war". I am glad to see that President Carter shares the views of all sane people in this respect.

The Russian experiment of communism was the result of a very corrupt and oppressive regime under the Tsars. When the Western powers, including Canada, sent troops to crush the revolution and support some renegade White generals these forces were soundly defeated and then the West proceeded to quarantine the new regime.

I would not want to live in Russia but I would also not want to live in many countries of Mr. Paine's "free world." Having lived in some of these "free" countries I know a little of my subject. There are many things in Russia I do not like but I am not very happy about the recurring periods of inflation and unemployment in the West. As Mr. Trudeau so rightly said, the private sector just does not appear to have an answer for this disease. We still seem to believe that we live in a system of "free enterprise" when all thinking people know that we live in mixed economy.

I am not pro or anti-Russian. I am for peace. — M. P. B. Wrixon, Victoria.



Spruce budworm munches on needles of evergreen tree.

Forest Pests

I've written to Forests Minister Tom Waterland suggesting that the current war on forest "pests" is dangerous, overlooks ecological balances and will prove ineffective in the long run. There is no way to stop the spruce budworm other than protecting the overall health of the forest. Roadbuilding, dambuilding, clear cut logging and other severe watershed disturbances are one reason that the budworm finds work. The other factor is sunspots: their, 22-year cycle produces drought which creates a need for budworms, pine beetles, grasshoppers and caterpillars, all of which save plant species by reducing moisture requirements.

There is a way to co-operate with this inevitable process, by simply letting the budworm select the trees to be logged and taking only those trees. Ideally, some form of humus (such as wood chips) and organic nourishment should be left at the site to compensate for what has been removed. This may sound like a lot of trouble, but it's nothing compared to the costs and problems created by spraying and other blunders. — Tom Anderson Ph. D., Okanagan Falls, B.C.

Saintly Banners

It was with more than a little pleasure that I read your April 5 editorial Grandmothers, and the use of the word "drivel", that would prevent us on this side of the 49th parallel from having a Watergate. It is rather strange that so many people can live in a state of fantasy. Your paper was kind enough to print former letters of mine on this same subject, but I did not dare use the word drivel. Nevertheless, my hide was on a fence post, so to speak, because I refused to accept the besmirching for our belief for our own identity; that is to be a foreigner in our own country. Is this a principle that goes with the banners of saints? This is not a top of the hat statement, Mr. Editor. It is part of my experience as a Canadian that dates back to 1894. Is it any wonder I cannot revere a nation under four of its monarchs and successive governments which used Canada as a dumping ground for 90,000 unwanted British subjects between 1832 and early 1900? We are expected to be very proud of those saintly banners. To many of us they belong to Britain, and out of place in Canada. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

Ominous Portents

My wife and I are senior citizens and consider ourselves exceedingly fortunate to have a family who care for us and would continue to do so even if we became a burden. However, many folks are not so lucky.

After reading the article by the doctor who "regrettably" does abortions, I began to think of the plight of the countless unwanted aged. If this physician can be persuaded to snuff out the life of an unborn child simply to convenience the mother socially, or economically, how long will it be until the elderly are also labelled socio-economic burdens?

If the deliberate taking of a human life is not a black and white issue, what on earth is? (The reporting physician termed abortion as a "grey" area). Would it not be even more practical to cut off life at age 80? At least these would have had a chance at life, unlike the tiny abortion victom who is destroyed before he takes his first breath.

Doctor, you kill defenceless unborn babies because as you say, the mother does not "feel she is carrying anything human," even though medical science has amply documented the humanity of the fetus from conception. How long will it be before your patients are telling you that they feel grandma or grandpa is no longer human, therefore, a painless injection which you could administer would be so helpful for everyone? Perhaps the ominous technological world of Orwell's 1984 is closer than we think.

To those who say impossible let me remind you that 10 years ago, abortions were done in only extremely rare cases. Today it is one of our hospitals most popular operations.

MacLean's of Jan. 10 quoted our own prime minister as saying: ". . .we may even have to put an end to our love for our parents and old people in society." Canada's three million over 65 should take note.

You sanctimoniously remind us you are always within the law. But, may I remind you that all the atrocities of Hitler, Mao and Stalin were within the law of the land, however, this did not make their actions right. Secondly, your abortions are still illegal in Canada as section 259 of the criminal code clearly states that abortion is forbidden unless the life or health of the mother is endangered. Do you really think your fraudulent interpretation of the term "mental health" makes your abortions within the law?

If today we give the mother the legal right to kill her unborn daughter who is a burden to her then tomorrow, we must logically extend to a daughter the legal right to kill her mother, who has become a burden to her.

Having taken human life out of the category of an inalienable right and hung a price tag of only relative value on an entire class of living humans, there is no logic to prevent placing price tags on other individuals or classes of humans.

Price tags sooner or later get marked down. In 1939, certain professors of psychiatry in Germany, decided that "all human lives are not worth living" and began to kill some defective German people. Six years later, the price had been lowered so much that pediatricians, in university hospitals, were killing German children who were bed wetters, who had misshapen ears or had learning disabilities. Notice I said physicians, not Hitler. The euthanasia program for defective pure blood Germans was conceived, and carried out in toto by professors of psychiatry, later joined by internists and pediatricians, entirely on their own. The Nazi government permitted it but had no direct part in it.

Twenty years of widespread acceptance of abortion had preceeded this, time during which these doctors had apparently grown accustomed to accepting the fact of killing to eliminate those who were a burden to society. Historians tell us that in the decade and a half before Hitler came to power, there were up to a million abortions a year in Germany, that was two for every three live births.

Today, in our own beautiful province, we are well on the way with one abortion for every two live births.

There always have been and always will be tragic human problems to solve. But surely it is how we solve these problems that counts. If we choose to solve the problem of the pregnant distressed woman by destroying the life within her, then what will prevent us from destroying other human lives—the elderly or the defective—when they also become a burden? Is this the society you want?

We stand at a turning point in civilization. Will we try to solve our problems by love, concern, self-sacrifice, unselfishness?

Or will we accept a new violence today, a solution of killing—a solution that may, for us individually and for our civilization, be some day truly a final solution?—Carey W. Smalley, 4998 Abbey Road.

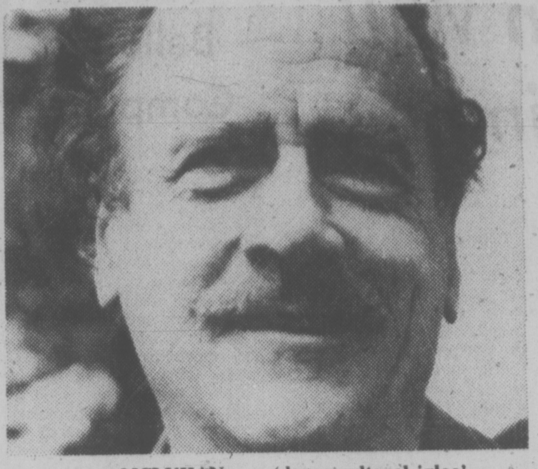
'More Trash And Less Literature'

By PETER MARTIN

(Martin is a Toronto publisher and president of the Readers' Club of Canada. He wrote this for The Globe and Mail

MASSEY . . . codified Culture



MCLUHAN . . . 'damp cultural igloo'

Every once in a while I stand up front of a university woman's club, or similar audience and talk about Canadian publishing. Mostly, I think I bore my listeners. But I always elicit a little "frisson" when I exclaim that what we really need around here is less literature, more trash. When I explain, few of my auditors see the light; most, alas, go right through the question period and into coffee-and-cookies convinced I'm a nut. Let's see what you think . . .

I know a guy who'd like to get out of the P.R. game and write tough-guy thrillers. He could to it, too, turn our a couple of novels a year, the kind of books you pick up when you want a "good read." He's a good wordsmith and he's sitting on outlines for a half-dozen sexy, violent tales about an undercover Mountie.

So why doesn't he get to it? Because he doesn't want to create Literature, just stories, and in this perverse land only Literature is encouraged. Writing must be Art, not entertainment, and every possible obstacle is put in the way of the journeyman entertainer.

Marshall McLuhan figured it out years ago. In Counterblast, an assault that followed The Mechanical Bride and preceded gurudom, the great man fingered the culprit: "Blast the Massey Report," he blasted. "Damp cultural igloo for Canadian devotees of Time and Life." Characteristically, MM said it again. Appositely, a few lines later: "Bless the Massey Report, huge red herring for derailing Canadian kulcha while it is absorbed by American Art and Technology."

That's it exactly, Dr. M. That's why my friend can't get out of corporate flakdom and write escape literature for us middle-brows. That's why Canadian films are Art, don't entertain anybody except inadvertently, and lose money. That's why the Fonz is king of the airwaves and Al Waxman has to be content with Kensington.

Officially, fun is frowned on around here.

There is, of course, a historical explanation for our joyless state. We never were, and still aren't, a popular democracy. Good taste, like good government, is imposed on us from above and always has been. First by English aristocrats of the second rank: antimacassar early Victorians, than whom no group of humans has ever been more tight-assed, except perhaps their successors as our mentors — Jehovah-ridden pleasure-fearing Presbyterians, Methodists and Low Churchmen to whom the reins of power were passed. Dour Scots merchants whose god was Mammon (never mind that they worshipped Bacchus and Priapus in le pays d'en haut; it was Mammon in Montreal). Black-swathed circuit riders and stump preachers in Canada West. Egerton Ryerson whose pleasure was power. Timothy Eaton and progeny imposing respectability on everyone (look at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church for the apotheosis of no-fun-allowed-here good taste). Finally inevitably one feels, our ultra-respectable fruitcake PM Mackenzie King appointed the ultimate ersatz-Appolonian Vincent Massey to codify the laws of Canadian Culture.

The rest, alas, we live with. Massey told the Establishment what they already knew — that Art could be cautiously encouraged but entertainment must be kept beyond the pale. Great gouts of your money and mine subsidize Literature and its creators (Canada-Council-appointed novelists who wear workboots, read to students and write books that sell 800 copies). Everything for Opera, nothing for country and western. CFDC money to Eliza's Horoscope, nothing for Cannibal Girls (and, oh, the consternation when it was discovered that the CFDC had money in Cinepix profitable soft-core pornoflicks like Deux Femmes en Or — but that's in Quebec, and, therefore, quite another story).

This is very sad, because most of us, most of the time, want entertainment, not art. Life is nervous-making and we need novels and movies and music and TV that let us escape for a while.

Enter the Americans. There's no conspiracy in the basement of the Pentagon to make us clients of American pop culture, just a lot of hustlers who give what the market wants. Paperback potboilers (99 per cent or thereabouts of the books on our newsstands are American). Movies and magazines. Starsky and Hutch. Sonny and Cher.

Official Canada is profoundly uncomfortable with entertainment; it is to be ignored, if not actively discouraged. So the Yankees entertain us.

There's a towering irony here, a pathetic wrong-headedness. Massey and his minions thought you could call forth great artists by offering money and commanding, "Make Art?!" They thought — and think — that popular entertainment just gets in the way.

But without bumpkin-pleasing bear-baiting and blood-and-thunder formula tragedies there would have been no Shakespeare. Without Grub Street, no Alexander Pope. Without orgiastic mysteries of Pan, no Aristophanes. Without tatter-sleeved second-raters scraping away at string banalities, no Mozart. Without pratfall backlot two-reelers, no Chaplin.

Great art isn't called into existence by Royal Commissions. It wells up, randomly and mysteriously I grant, from the entertainments of the people.

So let's get out of the Massey ghetto. Let's insist on Canadian genre junk on our newstands. Let's put tough quotas on the movie exhibitors so somebody can earn a buck and my gratitude by producing popular Canadian films. Let's blanket the country with Canadian trash.

Let's demand our right to indulge ourselves. If we're successful, then my friend can get out of public relations and make an honest living writing good Canadian trash. And maybe we'll produce some great art as a bonus.

Liberals Keep Finding the Answers Blowin' in the Wind

Latest Policy Shift to the Right

By JOHN DAFOE

. . . early guru

BULLOCH

Never underestimate the power of Canada's Liberals to keep in touch with the spirit of the times. It has kept them in power nationally for 36 of the past 43 years and may well keep them there for the rest of this decade.

The talent is not without flaws. They fell behind the public mood in 1957 and spent six years in opposition as a result. They got a little ahead of it during the 1960s and had to struggle for five years as a minority government. In some regions of the country, they manage at times to get totally out of touch. Sometimes, in their efforts to keep in tune with the fashions of the moment, they look a little like golden agers at a discotheque. But, by and large, they have the ability, unmatched by any other party, to sniff the wind of change and to shift direction to accommodate it without a backward glance or the slightest sense of shame or embarrassment.

One of those shifts is taking place at the moment and it received a significant push at the party's policy conference last month in Toronto. A quick look at the events in Toronto would lead to the impression that nothing happened. A deeper one would reveal that the Toronto meeting was the latest step in a process which is turning the Liberal party 180 degrees away from the direction which it set itself 17 years ago.

That direction was established at a conference, not officially of Liberals but of liberal-minded people, at Queen's University in Kingston. An uninvited but pervasive presence at that conference was John Kenneth Galbraith, the economist who, two years earlier, had published his book The Affluent Society. Galbraith's vision of private affluence existing side-by-side with public squalor permeated the conference.

Galbraith's spokesman at the conference was Tom Kent, a former journalist, later to become an aide to Lester Pearson. And Galbraith's solution — a substantial increase in the public sector of the economy at the expense of the private sector — became the conventional wisdom.

"The development that is relevant to social security," Kent told the conference, "is not a change in the organization of production but the increase of collective as opposed to private consumption.

" . . . If our existing economic system is incompatible with the present level of public services, then something will have to give. But it will not be the public services. It will be the economic system that gets changed."

And, as George V. Ferguson, the editor of the Star and an observer at the conference reported:

"What was significant was that, with minor exceptions, the Kingston study conference, composed of diverse elements of opinion, refused to clash with him except on minor points. The increasing emphasis on the public sector of the economy, as opposed to the private sector, was generally accepted."

Accepted, it turned out, not only by the thinkers but by the Liberal government which took power three years later and launched a substantial expansion of the public sector.

By the time the Liberals got another group of thinkers together in Harrison Hot-Springs, the public mood had changed. Big government was still the mode but a different kind of government.

The popular rhetoric of the day involved social revolution. Whether it was to be done violently or peacefully, right-thinkers were convinced that society was in for radical change, spurred on by youth.

Pierre Trudeau's keynote speech dealt with genetic engineering, and the symbolic invited speakers were not professors of economics but half-tamed hippies from Vancouver who created masochistic thrills among the delegates by warning them that the institutions they represented would soon be smashed by the power of the people.

The revolution never came. The best the spirit of the 60s could produce in the way of action by a Liberal government were a few programs such as Opportunities for Youth and Local Initiatives, and a poor people's conference at Toronto which achieved little except to scare the wits out of the solicitor-general of the day.

The faiths that marked the Kingston and Harrison Hot-Springs conferences — faith in the power of government and faith in the inevitability of radical social change — had vanished by the time the delegates gathered last month.

If there was a turning point, it came with the new year of 1976, when Pierre Trudeau delivered himself of some year-end musings about a new society which would require even more massive government intervention if the existing power groups could not learn to discipline themselves.

The reaction to those musings evidently convinced the government, and the party, that a new wind was blowing in the country and that the time had come, once again, to shift direction.

The new direction was signalled by a document of awesome blandness, entitled The Way Ahead, produced by the federal civil service. It was confirmed last month in Toronto.

The task of announcing the new direction fell to Senator Maurice Lamontagne, himself a veteran of Kingston.

"Governments," he announced, "must resist the temptation to grow bigger, to extend bureaucratic controls and to become more remote from the people."

The new gospel was not collective responsibility, as proclaimed in Kingston, but individual responsibility.

Significantly, the symbolic invited speaker at this year's conference was not a professor, not a hippy, but John Bulloch, head of the Canadian Federation of Independent Businessmen and a fiery evangelist for free enterprise and small business. Eight years earlier, Mr. Bulloch would have never got in the door.

The delegates, it appeared, were even more enthusiastic about their party's about-turn than were their leaders. They wanted no new government institutions, no new bureaucracies. They were suspicious of attempts to give powerful economic groups, such as business and labor, a share in economic decision-making. They were not turned on by suggestions, such as one from Senator Lamontagne, for new levels of government to guide a national consensus. They wanted a populist approach to government expressed through the traditional structure — the House of Commons.

What effect that new thinking will have on the actual performance of government remains to be seen. All governments, and Liberal ones more than most, are guided in their actions by more than the principles they may express at any moment.

The world will not stand still while the Liberals catch their breath. There are still problems of poverty, disunity and economic disparity to be dealt with and governments cannot ignore them.

No country, however, can live forever with activist government. There must be periods when a government draws back, assesses real needs and allows the country to catch its breath. There have to be periods when people come to terms with the fact that all problems cannot be solved by government.

However futile they may have been in other areas, the Liberal delegates did come to terms with that fact last month. In doing so, they may well have also come to terms with the mood of Canada today.

On the High Road To Condor Country

The directions were not only clear but the route they described seemed straightforward: "Proceed to Fillmore, turn north on Goodenough Avenue for 3.6 miles then turn right on a rough mountain road for 13 miles to Squaw Flat."

One morning, a couple of weeks ago, I found myself following those directions. I had the family along and a reliable little Datsun to cover the miles. We were all full of anticipation of what might lie at the end of that road, but none of us had given a thought to what lay along it.

Ours was a prime example of reading words and not comprehending their implications. The warning had been there — "rough mountain road" — but somehow it hadn't registered, because after driving our allotted 3.6 miles through the lemon groves of the Ventura Valley north of Fillmore — about 50 miles cross-country north of Los Angeles — we made that fateful right turn and quickly learned what "rough mountain road" means in southern California.

For the next 10 miles we found ourselves on the most hair-raising piece of "road" it has ever been my misfortune to drive. Through some of the most rugged beauty the southwestern United States has to offer, we threaded our way along a track that was seldom wide enough to accommodate the car comfortably and always threatening to deliver us — via a yawning 2,000-foot chasm on the driver's side — to a sudden and quite spectacular demise far below.

But our reason for being there drew us on — also the fact that there was no place to turn around. We were in the famed Sespe Corridor — the road to condor country, to California Condor country. The dry, rugged Topatopa Mountains rose almost vertically all around us and, in canyons between the mountains, tiny streams trickled to meet Sespe Creek far below, with their ultimate destination, the Pacific Ocean, a few miles to the west.

I won't dwell longer on the road except to say that having now completed the round-trip I'm not sure I'd ever tackle it again. The most dangerous feature of that Californian version of the Burma Road was majestic scenery; it tempted one's eyes away from the road — the place where they had to be glued if one was ever to reach the condors.

But we made it; not only that, when we reached Squaw Flat, we found we were not the first that day. Half-a-dozen cars were already ranged in the tiny parking area, but they were the only signs of humanity — a prestine and cathedral-like quiet ranged.

After an orange and a short rest to settle our nerves, we made our way up a 200-foot knoll and — as the instructions said — faced east. There, behind another range of low hills, and about two miles away, loomed the massive, pock-marked wall of Cobblestone Mountain — one of the current residences of the California Condor. If we were to see condors, they would be somewhere along that 2,000-foot sandstone face, or in one of the hundreds of wind-eroded caves that dotted it.

We settled back to wait — I've been too long in this birding game to expect instant success in an endeavor such as this — and take account of lesser kinds of life around us, lesser, that is, than California Condors.

As I sat there, I became aware of something vaguely familiar about my surroundings. It certainly wasn't what my eyes beheld that gave me this feeling — there is nothing on Vancouver Island that quite compares with the harsh, almost moonscape, features of the high Topatopas — but something my ears brought to me.

Tuning more selectively, I was surprised to discover that — had I shut my eyes and simply listened — I could have been in my own back yard in Victoria rather than 1,200 miles away in the mountains of southern California. Mixed with the harsh calls of Scrub Jays and the melodious phrasings of California Thrashers, the chaparral, sage and manzanita carried the familiar songs of a Bewick's Wren, Rufus-sided Towhees, White-crowned Sparrows and Audubon's Warblers. And, as if that weren't enough, from high overhead came the long scream of a Red-tailed Hawk and the hoarse croaks of a Raven.

Well, to make a long story short, several hours later we found ourselves facing that road again without having seen a condor but with the distinct feeling that somewhere on that great cliff behind us at least one pair of Condor eyes noted our departure.

'No Other Man Will Get Her': Testimony

VANCOUVER (CP) — The mother of slain poet Pat Lowther testified Friday that the victim's husband told her her daughter was the only exciting woman he had ever known and that no other man would ever get her.

Virginia Tinmouth was giving crown evidence at the British Columbia Supreme Court trial of Roy Lowther, charged with murder in the 1975 death of his wife.

Mrs. Lowther's nude body was found Oct. 13, 1975, in a creek near Britannia Beach, two weeks after her elder daughter reported her missing. Medical evidence showed she had received skull fractures. She is thought to have died two or three weeks prior to the discovery.

The crown says the accused was motivated by professional jealousy, because of his wife's success as a poet at a time when he was less successful, and because he believed she had left him for another man in Windsor, Ont.

Mrs. Tinmouth testified that in June, 1975, she, the accused and her daughter were in her home. She said they discussed Mrs. Lowther's career and Mrs. Tinmouth, thinking her daughter looked tired, said: "I hope she is having a little fun, too."

"Roy brought his fist down on the table and told me: 'your duaghter is the only exciting woman I have ever known and no other man will ever get her,'' Tinmouth said.

She said at that time she had no knowledge that her daughter was having an affair with an Ontario man.

She told defence counsel A. G. Henderson that she had never seen the accused physically harm his wife in their 12 years of marriage but added she had seen what she considered to be evidence on her body.

Pauline Bnnett testified that in 1975 she was a friend of both the victim and the accused.

She said Roy Lowther told her about problems in his marriage and about his hurt feelings because of his wife's success as a poet. (Mr. Lowther also is a poet.)

Bennett said he also told her his wife was being unfaithful to him.

"He felt that some of her poems were directed at him," she told crown counsel Samuel Hansen. "He was very hurt and spoke in a jealous way."

Elsie Wicks, who lives on Maypne Island, said that on Sept. 25 Mr. Lowther phoned her and said there had been some trouble at home. Two days later he arrived with the two children.

"He said that Pat had left him for another man," said Wicks. "I asked him if he would like Pat to come back and he said no, certainly not."

Wicks said Mr. Lowther told her he didn't know where his wife was.

ICBC Offer Balloting Completed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,800 Insurance Coroation opf British Columbia employees, members of the Office and Technical Employees' Union, have completed their vote on a company offer, Fred Trotter, a union spokesman, said Thursday. Results will not be known until next week.

The union has recommended rejection of company proposals for a nine-day fortnight in place of a four-day week at claims centres, a contributory pension plan that would be voluntary for present employees and a job evaluation $1,000 to all employees in the program. The ICBC offer of first year of a two-year contract is not an issue.

Coastal Ferries Extends Service

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coast Ferries Ltd. has announced it will extend its freight service to 10 isolated British Columbia coastal communities.

W. A. New, company president, said in a news release Friday the company has acquired a 176-foot former Canadian forces vessel, which will handle general cargo and will be fitted for cooler and freezer trafic.

The 12-knot vessel will have ample deck areas to transport care and trucks, he said.

New said the ship will be in service by late May to extend weekly cargo requirements to Port McNeill, Port Hardy, Namu, Bella Bella, Campbell Island, Klemtu, Ocean Falls, Bella Coola, Minerva Creek and Kwatna Bay. The company now services about 100 coastal centres between Howe Sound and Rivers Inlet.

The communities have received only limited service since the federal government ended a subsidy to Northland Navigation Ltd. Last November and Northland discontinued freight and passenger service.

Northland had operated on a $3.1 million annual subsidy and had asked the government for $4.5 million.

Sentencing Adjourned 7th Time

VANCOUVER (CP) — The official sentencing of a 16-year-old boy for the August, 1976, murder of 10-year-old Kelly Ann McLain was adjourned Friday for the seventh time because British Columbia lacks facilities to deal with juvenile offenders requiring psychiatric help.

The boy was remanded to July 15 when he appeared in juvenile court. He will undergo psychiatric treatment at Willingdon detention centre in Burnaby.

The Willingdon program, designed exclusively for the boy, will be administered by Victor Belknapp, provincial child welfare superintendent, and the B.C. corrections service.

The boy, unnamed because of his juvenile status, was found guilty Feb. 10 of the girl's murder.

The girl was stabbed 47 times as she hid under a blanket in a bathtub in an east end apartment during a game of hide-and-seek.

Ken Beauchamp, the boy's lawyer, said the court will review the boy's case after three months and decide whether the psychiatric program should be continued.

Computer Phone Exchange Opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — Electronic common-control switching for telephones will be expanded in downtown Vancouver Sunday when engineers at British Columbia Telephone Co. activate a $6.5 million computer-style exchange centre.

"The new centre," company spokesman Bob Johnston said Friday, "will serve business and residential customers whose telephone umbers are in the '687' exchange.

He said the changeover will provide electronic automatic exchange service for about 2,000 customers and the remainder of subscribers in the downtown area would be converted to the new technology over the next 2½ years.

Firemen Agree

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city's 800 firefighters have agreed to a wage increase of six per cent for 1977, well within the federal government's guidelines of price and wage control. The increase to $1,513 a month from $1,429 a month for a first-class fireman has been ratified in a letter of agreement signed by the firefighters' union, a union spokesman said Friday.

Porno Seizure

WHITE ROCK (CP) — RCMP said Friday they raided a home here and seized a large quantity of pornographic material and equipment. Police said charges of publishing and distributing pornographic material were pending.

Case to Re-Open

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Friday they will reopen the Edward Burtinshaw murder case as a result of new information received from a friend of the victim.

Burtinshaw, 20, a night maintenance man at Woodward's downtown department store, was shot seven times Dec. 3, 1974, by an intruder apparently stealing from a gun display.

A 13-year-old juvenile was found guilty of the murder Feb. 25, 1975, and juvenile court placed him in a secure phychiatric centre to undergo at least three years of intensive treatment.

RCMP superintendent Bruce Northrup said Friday that detectives from the Vancouver RCMP special investigations unit were working on the case. He confirmed that representations were made by a friend of the victim, Kathy Gerak, who had discovered certain inconsistencies in testimony connected to the case.

Hearing Set

VANDERHOOF (CP) — The preliminary hearing of Richard Redekop of Vanderhoof, charged with criminal negligence, was set over Friday to June 20. Redekop was to have appeared Monday in provancial court.

He was charged after the car he was driving struck and killed Coreen Thomas of the Stoney Creek Indian Reserve July 3, 1976, as the woman was walking home with friends late at night. An inquest into the incident was held and the charge laid.

University Accepts Takeover

NELSON (CP) — An offer by the provincial government to take over Notre Dame University here has been accepted by the University's board of governors, Rowland Grant, president of NDU, said Thursday.

Grant said the government will pay off the debts of the financially-troubled school in return for control of its assets. The takeover is effective June 1.

He said he expects the agreement will be signed by the end of April.

The takeover was recommended in a report by the Universities Council of British Columbia and a proposal was put forward by Education Minister Pat McGeer earlier this month.

Grant said NDU does not want "to leave any students in the lurch" so will continue to grant degrees for the next five years to students already enrolled.

He said the university has negotiated large severance settlements for its faculty, who have all received termination notices. Details were not disclosed.

CBC 'Distorts' VSE's Image

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange does not have a good public image but the CBC's attack on it has given the public a distorted and false picture of its security market, Robert Scott, VSE president, said Friday.

Scott told a news conference it was completely incorrect to suggest that the exchange is controlled or influenced by either limited companies or by promoters, or is simply a tool of the member brokers.

He said the board of governors sets the policy for the exchange and the staff carries it out. He added he has been insistent that staff not be subject to interference from the governors.

Listed companies and their trading patterns are subject to strict surveillance at all times, he said.

Scott said all the examples used in a recent CBC program on the exchange related to judgment calls on the viability of a company's product or to companies whose shares only traded briefly on the exchange.

He acknowledged that a large part of the VSE's business is on the speculative side of the market but said were this not so, many successful companies would probably not exist today.

"The major mining companies do not have a good track record in finding new mines, even though they may finance and develop them to production," he said.

Scott said allegations that there is almost no industrial trading carried out on the VSE were not true. He said the industrial board accounted for 27 per cent of the VSE's trading value in 1976.

He called on the provincial government to delay a change in the Securities act, which will require that statements of material facts filed by VSE-listed companies also be approved by the superintendent of brokers, until the government's proposed study of B.C.'s capital markets has been completed.

No School Vote—McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer says the Social Credit government's plans to provide funding for independent schools in the province is not significant enough to warrant a referendum.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett told a news conference here earlier Friday that the government should hold a province-wide public referendum on the question of giving public funds to private schools.

Barrett said his call was not prompted by his personal opinions but out of fear that the province will be permanently committed to supporting private schools. He said such issues are rare but when they do crop up governments should take advantage of legislation that provides for calling referendums.

McGeer said a plebiscite can't be held in the province "for every single bill that comes along."

"This is just one of many on the order paper," said McGeer. "The support for independent schools issue is one of Dave Barrett's stronger prejudices, but his action reveals more the strength of his own personal opinion than the importance of the issue.

Young Remark Irks UN Arabs

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Twenty Arab UN delegations have expressed surprise to U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young for saying Arab hatred of Jews reminded him of Ku Klux Klan hatred of blacks.

The Arabs took issue with Young in a letter released Friday night while the U.S. state department was scrambling to patch up any diplomatic damage resulting from a remark Young made Thursday when he said he thought the South African government was illegitimate.

"All the Arabs differentiate between Zionism and Judaism," the Arab group said in the letter. "We consider Judaisma sacred religion as Islam and Christianity."

Zionism is the movement to create a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

Amin Helmy II, the Arab League UN observer, released the l etter to reporters. He said the group was indignant when first learning of the remark but decided to soften the letter after a meeting Young had with Ambassador Ali Humaidanof the United Arab Emirates.

Young excused himself to Humaidan saying "he was new, he was ignorant, he was learning," Helmy said.

Young's remarks on Arab-Jewish feelings were made March 30 in a closed-door meeting with the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. Libya complained about the remarks at a UN Security Council meeting on Tuesday.

Spokesmen for Young declined to release the remarks on grounds they were made off the record. But Richard Cohen, press spokesman for the Jewish organization, said he took notes which showed Young said:

"I had seen hatred by people with Ku Klux Klan mentality based on ignorance in the United States. But in Jordan, I had my first experience of hatred on the part of intellectuals. It brought terror to my heart.

"I understood Israel's need for military support. I understood why Israel had to be strong and secure to cope with the hatred of its neighbors."

The Arab group said it considered the matter closed in view of "clarifications" Young gave Humaidan, and that they wanted to establish withYoun g "a fruitful dialogue and the best co-operation in the future."

Young, America's first black ambassador to the UN, was asked in an interview Thursday if he thought the government of South Africa was illegitimate." Yeah," he responded.

South African Foreign Minister R. F. Botha summoned U.S. Ambassador William Bowdler in Cape Town on Friday to ask about Young's remark.

The U.S. state department then informed South Africa the remark did not reflect official U.S. policy.

Killer Bounty Dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — A 5,000-member gun federation has suspended a $200 bounty offered to shopkeepers who kill would-be robbers.

Efforts to distribute bounties turned down by merchants hit snags Friday when other proposed recipients spurned money from the controversial awards.

Three merchants were originally named recipients. But "they obviously do not seek this kind of publicity," said Gerald Preiser, head of the Federation of Greater New York Pistol and Rifle Clubs, after two of the three said they would refuse the money.

"We discussed it with the board of directors last night and a determination was made that we had made our point."

Preiser said the $600 for the three merchants" awards would be given to the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association fund for widows and orphans of slain police officers. But the police organization declined the offer and suggested the Preiser give the money to city hall to start a fund to rehire laid-off police officers.

Preiser said he will redraft the cheque but a city hall spokesman said the bounty program was "sickening, reprehensible and has absolutely no place in the city."

Preiser said the purpose of the "courageous citizen's award" is to call attention to the growing crime rate in New York City to encourage citizens to own firearms, to applaud the efforts of merchants to defend themselves and to pressure the city to improve police protection.

CARTER HOLDS TO ARMS HOPE

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Jimmy Carter reiterested Friday his hope of meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in the United States this year but cautioned that he would not succumb to "pressure" to achieve a strategic arms agreement at the summit.

Outwardly unpreturbed by another harsh Soviet criticism of his arms limitation proposals, the U.S. president said he perceives enough "flexibility" in the Soviet position to retain hope an arms accord can still be reached, perhaps this year.

"I don't consider the SALT talks at this point to have reached an impasse," Carter said.

Boycott Cancels Emmys

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. notified the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences on Friday that it is cancelling the 1977 Emmy awards show for nightime television programs.

NBC said it would be "embarrassing" to televise the nighttime awards because many TV stars have refused to participate.

NBC still plans to televise the Emmy awards for daytime show on May 12.

The threatened boycott by major performers — including past Emmy winners Mary Tyler Moore, Valerie Harper and Edward Asner — resulted from a dispute between the National Academy and its Hollywood chapter.

The nighttime awards show had been tentatively scheduled for May 15.

Robert Howard, president of NBC television network wrote Richard Rector, chairman of the National Academy board in New York, that it "seems likely that so few winners of Emmy Awards will be present to accept the award personally that it would be embarrassing, indeeded futile, to call the names of the winners with the expectation of their coming to the stage during the show."

He added: "We have received telegrams indicating that over 75 major performers are not participating in the program."

The Emmy shows have ben on television for the last 26 years.

In addition to the refusal by many performers to appear on the nighttime awards program, there is a wholesale refusal by stars and producers to sumbit nominations for the awards.

Creative figures in Hollywood have said that although most prime time programming honored by the Emmy shows originates in Los Angeles, control of the academy has been taken by a coalition of New York and 11 regional chapters.

They claim they now have little voice in running the academy they created in 1948. They also say the academy is largely financed by rights to the Emmy TV broadcast, which is rotated annually among the three networks.

Man Beaten To Death In Crash

MANNING, S.C. (UPI) — Police said a man jumped out of a ditch where his car landed after hitting another car, beat one man to death with a lead pipe and attacked six others before he was subdued Friday night.

Milton Harriott, 28, of Conway was charged with murder and more than six counts of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Clarendon County Sheriff T. J. Jackson said Harriott's car landed in the ditch off Interstate 95, 12 miles north of Manning, after it sideswiped a car driven by Atlas Williams.

The sheriff said Williams walked over to the ditch to check on Harriott, who came out swinging a lead pipe. Williams was struck on the head repeatedly with the pipe and killed in view of his wife and daughter.

Jackson said Harriott then approached a car that stopped to see what was happening and ordered the driver to get out and give him the car. The driver refused and Harriott allegedly struck him also.

Sheriff Harry Williamson of Bryan County, Ga., and his brother, both from Pembroke, Ga., stopped and made an effort to subdue the man, Jackson said.

Williamson fired six shots at Harriott, who was not hurt because the gun was loaded with scattershot. Harriott reportedly took the sheriff's car and rammed it into a state highway patrol car.

Williamson, his brother and patrolman Paul Ramsey managed to subdue Harriott and handcuff him to a guard rail.

Hughes' 'Will' Fake, Says FBI

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — The FBI says the Howard Hughes "Mormon Will" is a fake — and a poor one — but Melvin Dummar is sticking to his story on the strange origin of the disputed document.

Two FBI handwriting experts in Washington "determined that the envelope and three-page will was not prepared by Howard R. Hughes," Nevada Attorney-General Robert List said Friday.

"In fact, the FBI determined the writing represented an unskilled attempt to copy writings of Howard R. Hughes," List reported to district court judge Keith Hayes.

The FBI report does not affect plans for a trial in July to determine the document's authenticity. Hayes has said the trial will be held in any case to establish a clear record.

In Ogden, Utah, Melvin Dummar said he was not upset by the FBI report.

Dummar is the former gas station operator named in the "will" to receive one-sixteenth of the Hughes fortune, purportedly because he found Hughes bleeding in the desert in 1968 and gave him a ride to Las Vegas.

"I think the FBI has been wrong before," Dummar said.

"About 50 per cent of the time they're wrong, so I don't think that their handwriting experts are any better than the handwriting experts that said it was valid."

The same argument was voiced by Harold Rhoden, the attorney representing the will's designated executor, former Hughes lieutenant Noah Dietrich, who is trying to prove the document is valid.

After the will was discovered on a desk in Mormon church headquarters, Dummar said its existence was a surprise. When the FBI found his fingerprint on the envelope, he admitted in court that he lied, saying he delivered it. He testified he had nothing to do with its preparation, saying it was left at his gas station by a mysterious stranger.

An Anchorage, Alaska, contractor, Levare Forsythe, later gave a sworn statement that he was the stranger. Forsythe said he was a secret courier for Hughes for many years and was handed the will by Hughes himself in 1972 for delivery after his death.

PRIEST SUES PARENTS

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — A former Richland man who went to Oklahoma to join a Catholic sect has filed a $3.2 million lawsuit against his parents for allegedly interfering with his religious preference.

Walter Robert Taylor, 22, named in the complaint as Father Philaret Taylor, filed the suit in United States district court in Oklahoma City. Named as defendants were his father, Dr. Walter Taylor; his mother, Sylvia Taylor, and brother, David Taylor, all of Richland; 10 other persons and 16 listed as John Doe.

The plaintiff, a traditionalist monk in the monastery of the Holy Protection of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Oklahoma City, said he was imprisoned, subjected to emotional distress, assaulted and deprived of his civil rights during a deprogramming attempt last August.

Los Angeles Seeking Grant To Study Odd Earth Bulge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The mysterious "Palmdale bulge" — a swelling of the earth's crust near the San Andreas fault — could signal an impending earthquake and the city wants $1 million in federal funds to find out.

The city council Thursday applied for the grant so the city Bureau of Engineering, aided by Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties, can evaluate earthquake hazards and gather data to assist scientists in the prediction of earthquakes.

The mile-long swelling in the Mojave Desert about 50 miles north of Los Angeles was discovered late last year. It was then a 10-inch bubble over a kidney-shaped area of about 4,500 square miles around a 450-mile line along the San Andreas fault, where many California earthquakes are triggered.

Last February, the bulge further puzzled scientists by showing signs of sinking.

Dr. Robert O. Castle of the U.S. Geological Survey, who discovered the bulge, theorized that it might be migrating like a bubble trapped beneath the surface of the earth, "or it could be that the bulge is concentrating itself in a very localized area.

"Or again," he added, "it could be the bulge is simply subsiding."

SOVIET FISH CAPTAIN IS CHARGED

BOSTON (UPI) — The United States government has officially charged the captain of a Soviet fishing vessel with breaching the 200-mile fishing limit law and is seeking to confiscate his ship and its cargo of 397 tons of fish.

Alexander Gupalov, master of the 275-foot trawler Taras Shevchenko, Friday appeared before a U.S. magistrate and was told he faces penalties if convicted of up to one year in jail and a maximum $100,000 fine.

The trawler was boarded about 130 miles off Nantucket Island from the cutter Decisive on April 9. It was the first time the government has charged a foreign skipper with criminally violating the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976.

$165M White Elephant

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Trans Mountain Pipeline Ltd. is trying to sell a yo-yo concept to the federal government in an attempt to save the Vancouver-based company.

Ken Hall says if his sales pitch doesn't work, the 715-mile Edmonton-to-Vancouver oil line will become a $165 million white elephant.

Once a major carrier of Canadian oil to the Pacific Northwest area of the United States, Trans Mountain is running at one-third of its capacity because of Canada's elimination of crude exports.

Trans Mountain's gross revenues of $52 million in 1974 declined to $37.6 million in 1976. Profits fell to $7.7 million from $14.3 million in the same period. To make matters worse, refiners in the U.S. midwest scrambling for a link with Alaska's crude oil supplies in Prudhoe Bay are ignoring Hall's line in favor of newer, more expensive projects.

The two main proposals for moving Alaska crude bypass Trans Mountain.

The $500-million Kitimat project would move oil from a Kitimat tanker terminal to Edmonton for pumping through Alberta lines to the U.S.

The second, the $1.5-billion Northern Tier project, would move the oil east through a new all-American pipeline from terminals in Washington State.

Hall's yo-yo concept would expand and modify the Trans Mountain line, for $125 million, to move Alberta crude to B.C. refineries one week, then pump Alaska crude to Alberta for delivery to the U.S. the next.

Trans Mountain's partner, Atlantic Richfield, would expand its Cherry Point, Wash., pipeline terminal to accommodate 20,000-ton tankers from Alaska.

Hall said in an interview it might seem smart to buy the Alaska crude for B.C. refineries and leave the Alberta oil where it is, but Alberta oil is more than $3 a barrel cheaper then its imported competitor.

It makes sense to use that Alberta oil, said Hall, and let the Americans keep their more expensive crude.

Crows Nest

Crows Nest Industries Ltd. reports higher sales and income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1976, because of higher prices for lumber, oil and gas.

The Fernie-based company reported net income of $918,000 or $1.22 a share compared with $487,000 or 65 cents a share in 1975.

Sales were $12,146,000 compared with $8,397,000 the previous year.

Thomas Gleed, chairman and president, said in the company's annual report that earnings outlook for 1977 is favorable because the company will get production payments of 50 cents a short ton of coal from Kaiser Resources Ltd. Payments will continue until $34 million has been paid.

Giant Mascot

Shareholders of Giant mascot Mines Ltd. have approved a one-for-four consolidation of the company's share capital and a change of name to GM Resources Ltd. L. P. Starck, company president, said that the name change is to reflect the company's recent involvement in petroleum. Since closing its British Columbia nickel mine in 1974, the company has acquired oil and gas interests in western Canada. Starck said GM Resources' head office will be moved from Vancouver to Calgary at the end of May. He said the share consolidation would facilitate a rights-offering the company plans to make within a few months.

Rio Alto

Rio Alto Exploration Ltd. intends to raise additional equity capital through a rights offering on the basis of one additional share for each common shares, the company says in a news release. R. W. Termuende, company president, said the share price and record date will be announced soon, following receipt of regulatory approvals. He said when all rights are exercised on the company's outstanding common shares, an additional 414,787 common shares will be issued. Canada Northwest Land Ltd., which owns 25.2 per cent of the common shares, has agreed to the exercise of its rights and to purchase all additional shares for which the rights have not been exercised, Termeunde said. Rio Alto exploration is listed on the Alberta stock exchange.

Algoma

The Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. suffered a pre-tax loss for the first quarter of 1977, despite setting a record for steel shipments, president Dr. John Macnamara says. He told the annual meeting of shareholders that "product mix was unfavorable, involving a significant tonnage of semi-finished product and we experienced a pre-tax loss, althought the loss was lower than that suffered in the first quarter of last year." However, he gave no figures for the 1977 quarter. Last year, Algoma had a pre-tax loss of $4.34 million in the first quarter but tax credits gave the firm net earnings of $4.57 million in the same period. Productivity has increased 10 per cent in the last two years at Algoma's steel works division, Pat Rooney, vice-president of operations, told about 60 investment analysts prior to the shareholders' meeting. Dr. Macnamara also announced that David Holbrook, Algoma chairman, will retire from the company in July. No replacement was named.

Kelly Douglas

Raymond Addington, president and chief operating officer of Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. says the company expects to open several more stores in British Columbia this year. Kelly, Douglas is involved in the food and drug manufacturing, wholesale and retail businesses in western Canada and Colorado and is part of the George Weston-Loblaw food store chain. Its 1976 sales of $93 9million were 1976 sales of $939 million were the second highest of any B.C. firm, and were up 15.4 per cent from $814 million in 1975. Net profit was $13.35 million in 1976. In his report to shareholders, Addington said the company was positioned to continue its growth in spite of the trading climate. He said there now is doubt about the economic outlook, particularly in terms of growth in western Canada, where most of the company's interest lie.

Petrofina

Petrofina Canada Ltd. has reported net earnings of $22,036,000 or $2.91 a share, for the year ending Dec. 31, 1976, a 30.9 per cent decrease from $31,913,000 or $3.20 a share in 1975.

Revenues increased by 25.8 per cent in 1976 to $501,527,000, compared with $398,756,000 in 1975, Petrofina reported in its 1976 annual report.

The company said results were affected by excess refinery capacity in eastern Canada and a one per cent increase in Canadian demand for refined products.

The federal government's curtailment of exports of refined products to the United States in 1976 caused an oversupply position and "fierce competition," which resulted in narrowed profit margins, the company added.

No Halt in Housing Plans

Work will proceed this year on low-cost housing and facilities for the elderly and handicapped despite the local surplus of residential units, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation regional manager C. J. Dowling said today.

Vancouver Island housing starts would be lower than the record 8,132 units in 1976 but federal funding will continue to be available.

Dowling made the comments in releasing the 1976 CMHC annual report for Vancouver Island. The report showed that of the 8,132 new housing units starts last year, 3,141 were provided under funds or guarantees from the National Housing Act.

These included 2,577 homes for families of modest income, 70 homes for low income families and 144 homes for senior citizens.

The brisk pace of construction could not be expected to continue through 1977.

"There are indications that, for the short term at least, the supply of rental units and of some types of ownership units may have caught up with demand," Dowling said.

"It is possible, therefore, that the volume of housing starts may level off.

"However, emphasis will continue to be placed on the provision of affordable housing. Care facilities, too, both for the elderly and the handicapped, will be supported by NHA funding."

Program Extended

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Friday that Prince George and Kelowna now have set up programs to identify infants with hearing impairment. The two cities join Trail, Kamloops and Terrace in offering the service, he said.

Belgians Voting Sunday

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Economic problems and a long-standing language dispute are the major issues as Belgians prepare for their 11th national election since the Second World War.

Nearly 20 political parties and groups are contesting Sunday's election in Brussels alone, but the same major national and federalist parties seem likely to be represented in the new House of Representatives as in the outgoing parliament.

Like most postwar governments, there probably will be a coalition or, as one cynical voter put it, "a reshuffle of the same old faces."

At the heart of the election campaign lies a mixture of political, economic and cultural strife of the kind that has characterized this country of 10 million, divided between the French and Flemish, through most of its 140-year history.

'Cowardly, Vicious Attack' Jails Former Sooke Man

A 29-year-old former Sooke man was sentenced in county court Friday to one year in jail for what Judge E. J. C. Stewart described as a "cowardly and vicious attack" on a man in downtown Vancouver three years ago.

Albert Wien pleaded guilty last October to armed robbery in Vancouver May 22, 1974, but failed to appear for sentence Nov. 8. He was picked up Jan. 31.

Court was told he was scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing in Vancouver but failed to appear.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said one other man was sentenced to one year for his part in the armed robbery and another was sentenced to three years for armed robbery and wounding.

He said Wien was on probation on a drug offence when the armed robbery occurred.

He urged serious consideration for a jail sentence, saying Wien has "shown an almost contemptuous attitude to the courts in failing to appear."

Defence counsel Bill McElmoyle said the armed robbery occurred in Vancouver's skid-road area and Wien's only part in it was standing by the man who was stabbed.

Stewart said the delays in dealing with the armed robbery case in court were "almost entirely" due to Wien himself.

He added that the material before him "justifies a concern that the word of this man is totally unreliable. He's irresponsible in the extreme and he is a potentially dangerous man and in fact has been a dangerous man."

Stewart said he was taking into account four months spent by Wien in custody on the armed robbery charge.

No Choice: Camosun Upgrades

Camosun College council has approved a $495,000 expenditure for building renovations that will be useless if a major construction rojectp is approved.

But the college can't wait any longer, councillor and former chairman Hal Knight said Friday.

"The fire marshal has been very lenient in not closing the place down."

Currently on the books for the college is an $11 million expansion project, that if approved, will include a major new building at the Lansdowne campus.

But there has been both a fire marshal's and Workers' Compensation Board's upgrading order on the existing Lansdowne buildings for more than a year.

Knight said most of the renovations would be unnecessary if the new building is ready, but some will be needed anyway and will fit into the $11 million project.

"There will be a bit of an overlap, but I don't know how much."

Another negative factor of the renovations is that classes will be disturbed by renovation work, and then disturbed again once construction begins on the new building, Knight said.

Council did save itself about $300,000 for work requested by ICBC for insurance reasons (such as fire resistant interior surfaces and an intruder alarm), when on April 1, the insurance corporation agreed to defer its requests pending resolution of the over-all plan.

Tenders for the $495,315 renovations will be called as soon as approved by the ministry of education.

Needed improvements include $157,000 structural work, $128,000 electrical, and $54,000 mechanical and $52,000 in professional fees.

Meanwhile the college is continuing to negotiate with the Greater Victoria school district for continued and expanded use of the old Mount View school buildings on Carey Road now that the school board has given Camosun preference for the facilities.

BEACH INN CLOSING

Wickaninnish Inn at Long Beach in Pacific Rim National Park will definitely be closed down at the end of the year, William C. Turnbull, director western region, Parks Canada, said Friday.

The inn will be turned into a parks centre which will include a tea room, he said.

Turnbull, of Calgary, was the main speaker at the unveiling of a plaque on the grounds of Craigdarroch Castle commemorating Robert Dunsmuir, founder of a 19th century commercial empire which included coal mining, lumbering, ironworks and railways.

Wickaninnish Inn was purchased by Parks Canada in 1973 but was allowed to continue operating as a resort on a year-to-year basis.

Parks Canada plans to put the building to a greater use. There will be a lounge for people, as well as a room for movies and meetings.

Zaire War Lull Ends

KINSHASA, Zaire — The first fighting since 1,500 Moroccan troops were airlifted into Kolwezi to bolster Zaire's forces was reported Friday about 40 miles west of the important copper-mining centre.

The fighting indicated a major rebel advance, but observers here were encouraged that Zaire's army had stood and fought.

Since the rebels invaded copper-rich Shaba (formerly Katanga) Province early last month, Zaire's army, more often than not, has tended to withdraw without putting up major resistance.

Informed sources said Moroccan soldiers were not involved in the fighting that began Friday. It marked the end of a lull that began three weeks ago when the important rail centre of Mutshatsha fell to the invading rebel from Angola.

Various reports suggested that there had been fighting in two areas, north and west of Kolwezi.

The sketchy reports reaching here indicated that Zaire's troops suffered between 30 and 40 casualties in the renewed fighting.

S. AFRICA PRESSURED

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Easing South Africa's apartheid policies will not stop the outside world from pressuring this country, Prime Minister John Vorster said today.

Vorster admitted political developments in South Africa and other parts of Southern Africa had hurt foreign investor confidence.

"We should have no illusions that by making adjustments in our domestic political set-up we can bring about a relaxation of all the outside pressures on our country," he said in a speech to the Associated Chambers of Commerce.

Vorster said his government would continue making steps to include all racial groups in the economic mainstream up to a point.

Blacks Protest Owen's Stand

SALISBURY Rhodesia (UPI) — A crowd of 200 blacks today protested British Foreign Secretary David Owen's rejection of Bishop Abel Muzorewa's plan to effect a swift transfer of power to Rhodesia's black majority.

Black students, in a protest action Friday night, told Owen to "go home" and sang the nationalist song: "We will take our country by the bazooka."

Owens arrived Friday, saying the United States is now a partner in the search for majority rule but warning that the overall chances for success are small.

He planned to meet today with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to discuss whether to hold a constitutional conference for possible majority rule in Rhodesia in 1978.

A crowd of 200 gathered today outside the hotel where Owen's party was staying. They carried placards demanding immediate elections to determine who should assume power, as proposed by Muzorewa.

Owen, however, was not staying at the hotel and police dispersed the protest after 15 minutes. No violence was reported.

Owen Friday said the plan for elections developed by Muzorewa, president of the United African Council, was "unacceptable at the present moment" because other nationalist organizations as well as the Rhodesian government reject it.

Billy Earns More Than Jimmy?

BILLY CARTER
. . . star billing

Washington Post

The swamp buggy racers in Naples, Fla., were getting all geared up for next weekend's annual charity event, until they found out $10,000 was going to one of the drivers — Billy Carter.

So all the drivers have pulled out of the event, and Billy Carter will attend the Farm City Barbeque in nearby Imokalee — still for $10,000.

Just Friday as it happens, Billy was stomping around the grounds of the Arizona State Fair in Tucson — for which he was paid $10,000, according to one member of the fair committee.

And if things keep going like this, he stands to make more money than his slightly better-known brother, whose presidential salary is $200,000.

Tandy Rice, a Nashville agent retained in February to co-ordinate Billy Carter's bookings, says he has "at least one appearance a week lined up for the future."

Rice wouldn't say how far into the future the bookings run. "He just attends these things as a guest of honor," said Rice, who also manages country and western singers Kitty Wells and Tom T. Hall. "These people contact us. And they're continuing to contact us. That's all I'll say."

Rice also wouldn't confirm Bill Carter gets $10,000 for all his appearances, although individuals in Florida and Arizona who were involved in getting Carter to visit their events said Rice quoted them a standard fee of $10,000.

"When you get right down to it, Billy Carter is a bargain at $10,000," said Bob Moates, who was involved in the Florida negotiations. "He attracts a lot of people."

The White House, where Billy Carter does not get $10,000 to appear had little to say Friday. "I don't have any comment on Billy's personal business," said press secretary Jody Powell. "He's not doing anything illegal, is he? Is his agent handling him any different than agents for newspaper people who are getting lecture fees?"

Billy Carter could not be reached for comment Friday.

NIXON LONELY 'IN ELBA'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Two women given a brief glimpse into the private world of Richard Nixon say the former president is lonely in exile — "like Napoleon at Elba" but was surprisingly "very up" during taping for a series of television interviews.

"I think he wants to finally tell America his side of Watergate — whether anyone believes him or not," said Arline Genis, a 43-year-old interior decorator, who with Sandy Blake designed the set for the interviews conducted by television host David Frost.

"I think people expect and hope that Nixon will be down," said Ms. Genis. "But he wasn't that way at all. He was very up. And very interested in all facets of the program. I think he's up because he has a project."

But Nixon "is a very lonely man," she added. "He can't go anywhere. He can't make statement on government policies like other ex-presidents."

MARGARET HOME WITH PIERRE

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, his wife Margaret and their three sons are spending the weekend together in Ottawa after separate travels which included the cities of Boston and Toronto and the ski slopes of Snowbird, Utah.

Margaret and the children reappeared Friday after dropping out of public view in Toronto while en route to Ottawa. She was returning from a four-day visit with family in Boston.

Part of her baggage and her bodyguard arrived here in the evening, but she did not accompany them. The prime minister's office said then it did not know where she was.

Trudeau Friday morning cut short a skiing vacation in Utah and flew to Toronto where he picked up his 28-year-old wife and the children.

The family then flew by commercial airliner to Ottawa arriving shortly before 7 p.m., an hour earlier than scheduled.

A limousine drove out onto the tarmac at Ottawa International Airport and whisked the family to their 24 Sussex Drive official residence. Because of Trudeau's and his wife's separate travels the family had not been united for mot of this month.

Friends of Mrs. Trudeau's have reported the coupl is attempting a 90-day trial separation, but neither she nor her husband has commented on any suspected marital discord.

VEVEY, Switzerland — Actor Charlie Chaplin spent his 88th birthday today in bed with the flu.

"All out eight children are here and we had hoped that Charlie would be able to be up with us, but the doctor says he has to stay in bed at least until next Tuesday," said Oona Chaplin's wife of 34 years.

MOSCOW — A Soviet court has sentenced a 53-year-old Russian, Boris Gorbenko, to death for his participation in Nazi war crimes the daily newspaper Socialisticheskaya Industria reported Friday. He participated in a number of executions and punitive raids against Soviet partisans.

MOSCOW — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, has cancelled his trip to China next month because of his heart attack, IOC director Monique Berlioux said Friday.

But there's a catch. Foley must dismantle the two-storey structure and remove it from the Canadian National Exhibition grounds in 72 hours.

SEOUL — Han Byung-ki, head of South Korea's observer mission at the UN General Assembly, has been named ambassador to Canada, the government announced today.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The accused persons' docket wasn't large enough Friday in Victoria provincial court to accommodate six men jointly charged with one offence and separately charged with six other offences in connection with an incident Friday morning in the 600 block of Yates Street.

In what Victoria city police described as an old-fashioned donnybrook and crown counsel Nicholas Lang called a first-class brawl, six Sooke residents, including three brothers, were jointly charged with obstructing a peace officer in the execution of his duty.

Charged were 22-year-old Daniel Bell, 21-year-old Ronald Steven Bell and 20-year-old Dennis Edward Bell, all of 2120 Church Road; 24-year-old Joseph Claude Deschamps, of 45 Sturdee, 21-year-old Ian Edmond Young, of 1704 Whiffinspit Road, and 20-year-old Kermet Gavin Ross, of no fixed address.

In addition, Daniel Bell was fined $100 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana and Dennis Edward Bell was fined $75 on the same charge. Dennis Edward Bell and Deschamps were also charged with assaulting a peace officer and Ross was charged with wilful damage to the window and door of a police vehicle.

All were remanded until Wednesday for electon and plea and all but the Bell brothers were released on their own recognizance. Daniel and Dennis Bell were released on $1,000 cash or surety bail and Ronald Bell was released on $500 cash or surety bail.

A total of 12 police officers was called to quell a disturat Scott's Cafe, 650 Yates, and the melee spilled out onto the street before order was restored.

Two men were committed for higher court trial on charges of possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace and possession of an unregistered, restricted weapon.

Judge Fred Green committed 28-year-old Ossie William Barnes and 20-year-old Patrick Norman Witter, both of 252 Gorge Road East, on the charges but reserved his decision on a charge of conspiracy to commit armed robbery.

Testimony and final arguments were completed Friday in the three-day preliminary hearing by Lang and defence lawyers Michael Hutchison and David Wilson.

They have elected trial by judge alone and were denied bail earlier.

An 18-year-old Medicine Hat girl was released on $500 surety bail Friday on a charge of possession of stolen property.

Sandra Lee Medcalf was remanded until next Tuesday for election on the charge, laid Wednesday in connection with a break-in Good Friday of a Medicine Hat dairy in which $5,000 cash was taken.

Two 16-year-olds from Alberta appeared in Victoria family court Friday in connection with the same incident and were ordered returned to Medicine Hat to face a charge there.

Lang told Judge Harold Alder that $3,000 and a car purchased by the three had been recovered by Victoria city police.

★ ★ ★

Two of three men jointly charged in a Tuesday morning break-in at Gonzales Pharmacy, 1845 Fairfield, were denied bail Friday by Alder.

★ ★ ★

A 21-year-old Victoria resident pleaded guilty to a break-in earlier Friday morning at the medical-dental building at 1120 Yates.

Clifford George, of 1158 Yates, was remanded in custody until next Friday for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Lang told the court George broke a window on the north side of the building and was apprehended by Victoria city police on the fifth floor of the building.

According to a police spokesman, a silent alarm was tripped shortly after 1 a.m.

Lang also asked for $200 compensation for the broken window.

A 17-year-old who used foul language while drunk at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, at 1975 Bee, was given a suspended sentence, placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Mark Russell Green, of 1702 Duchess, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by using obscene language in the lobby of the centre March 30.

Alder said Green was too young to be so drunk and told the youth that the mark of a man was his ability to refrain from using bad language, not his ability to use it.

★ ★ ★

Brock Robert Ballendine, 28, of 1670 Fort, and Trevor Patrick Clanton, 20, of 2839 Fifth Street in Sidney, had their bail applications denied and were remanded to Monday for election.

Michael Eric Still, 22, of 3220 Quadra, did not apply for a bail hearing and was remanded until Monday.

Silver pellet in ear helps smokers to quit

More Than Six Million Hooked on Smoke Habit

"Tobacco is a dirty weed.
I like it.
It satisfies no normal need.
I like it.
It makes you thin, it makes you lean.
It takes the hair right off your bean.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Graham Lee Hemminger was only 19 when he wrote that ditty in 1915. He knew the score. He was a smoker. He died at age 53.

Smokers have a tendency to die young. It's estimated that every time a smoker lights up a cigarette, he's shortening his life by about five minutes.

More than six million Canadians are hooked on the habit — 44.7 per cent of the adult population.

Last year they puffed away at a rate approaching 100 packs a second based on sales of 62.1 billion cigarettes.

It was a record year, up 7.6 per cent over the 57.7 billion cigarettes sold in 1975.

In the United States, which has 10 times Canada's population, the number of cigarettes sold was between 640 and 650 billion.

Tobacco is big business despite a growing awareness of the dangers in smoking.

In Canada it ranks in the top 40 manufacturing industries. Since 1970, it's been our fifth most valuable crop after wheat, barley, rape seed and flax. More than 4,000 farms cultivate the crop, mainly in Ontario but also in B.C., P.E.I. and Quebec. The industry employs 25,000 full-time and another 50,000 to 60,000 seasonally.

Tobacco is big business for governments. It is the fourth most important source of revenue for the federal government after income tax, sales tax and customs tax.

The combined federal and provincial taxes on tobacco products last year exceeded $1 billion. In B.C. 35.1 cents of the price of a pack of 20 cigarettes goes to taxes, 25.5 cents to the federal treasury, and 9.6 cents to the province.

The price of smoking in terms of health is staggering — beyond reckoning.

Smoking is linked to lung cancer, chest diseases such as emphysema and coronary heart attack. It is associated with pregnancy problems, spontaneous abortions, stillbirths and hyperkinetic behaviour.

It is a contributing cause of peptic ulcers, cancer of the bladder, and hernias. It is blamed for various gum diseases, loss of hearing, and even facial wrinkles.

According to a recent article in the Medical Post, the chances of a smoker developing lung cancer are about one in a 100, of developing emphysema, one in 10. Recent tests indicate smoking is one of the main contributors to fatal coronaries, the number one 'natural causes' killer.

ARNEIL
. . . smoking deadly

Last year 713 persons in the Capital Region District died of coronary diseases, 119 of lung cancer, and 43 of chest diseases including 12 who had emphysema.

Regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil says cigarette smoking was associated with the majority of the deaths, and in the case of lung cancer, the vast majority.

Smoking is costly and deadly in other respects.

Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Heppell says in the past two years six persons have died and 24 been injured in city fires directly attributable to careless smoking.

Careless smoking, he says, caused 12 per cent of all the fires in Canada last year.

It is debatable whether the number of smokers is shrinking or getting larger. Spokesmen for the tobacco industry feel there is a small but steady increase based on an average two or three per cent growth in sales each year.

But a study by the federal government into Canadian farm economies noted that between 1965 an 1972 the number of smokers declined half a million, from 6.6 million to 6.15 million.

One trend is clear. More women, particularly young women are smoking these days than ever before. In 1970 24.9 per cent of females aged 15 to 19 smoked; in 1974 the percentage was 27.8. The number of male smokers in the same age group fell from 32.3 per cent to 29.5 per cent.

To a non-smoker, the use of tobacco is a strange, unimaginably perverse habit.

Indeed when Christopher Columbus discovered the New World he was said to have been awe-struck at the spectacle of Indians inhaling smoke through Y-shaped pipes they called tabacas.

He and subsequent explorers brought the plant to Europe and by 1600 tobacco was in fairly wide use. It was regarded then as a cure for 'vapors', a way, ironically, of cleansing the body and soul.

Tobacco owes its entire success to the narcotic it produces — niccotine. The plant itself is useless except for the drug which is a powerful insecticide, as toxic to man incidentally as it is to insect.

Researchers have counted 300 dfferent compounds in the manufactured cigarette of which at least five are known carcinogens, or cancer-causing agents.

The gases the burning cigarette gives off should make any smoker wonder why he persists with the habit.

They include: carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide methane, acetylene, formaldehyde, acetaldehyde, acroline, acetone, ammonia, nitrogen dioxide, hydrogen sulphide, menthanol, methyl chloride and hydrogen cyanide.

And, he says, he doesn't like it.

Quitting: It's Never Easy But There's Help

Nothing is as easy to master as a bad habit.

And smoking is one of the easiest.

By the time a teenager finishes his first pack of cigarettes he or she tends to be hooked for life.

Those are the sentiments of Barbara Sletvik, a 27-year-old Victoria businesswoman who for 11 years smoked up to two packs a day.

Four years ago she joined Smoke Watchers. She started by cutting back her smoking to seven cigarettes a day and seven weeks later, got up one morning and said to herself "This is it."

She hasn't smoked since.

She's involved in Operation Kick It, an anti-smoking program initiated two years ago in British Columbia by the TB Christmas Seal Society.

Kick It made its debut in Victoria last fall when Royal Jubilee Hospital decided to offer the program to its 2,400 employees.

Dr. Ray LeHuquet, hospital medical director, says it was an instant hit.

"So many people have been applying for the course we've had to increase the instructing staff," he says.

Norma Halbert, of the hospital's employee health services, says three classes have been completed and two more are underway in the hospital complex.

The program has attracted wide interest in the community. It's now offered to employees at the Legislature, ICBC, B.C. Telephone, Eaton's and Glendale and Victoria General hospitals.

The course involves one 90-minute session a week for 11 weeks. Most classes have an enrolment of between 12 to 18.

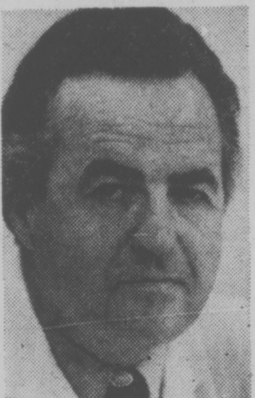
One of the attractions of the program is it is free. Another is most of the instructors are ex-smokers, like Barbara Sletvik, who can fully appreciate the agony their students are going through.

Barbara, who instructs two classes at Eric Martin Institute each week, says exercise, fresh air, and a well-balanced diet with plenty of vitamin B and C are exphasized. But the key to the program is helping smokers "unlearn" the habit.

First, she says, they have to really want to go through the ordeal.

Second they have to understand the causes of his habit.

And third, they have to be able to substitute good new habits.



LEHUQUET
. . . instant success

But it isn't easy, for smoking is more than a habit. Doctors say it's an addiction.

Ironically, recent studies have shown that well over half of all smokers would like to quit smoking.

The question is how.

The statistics are discouraging. According to the Christmas Seal Society for every person who gives up smoking for good, there are four who have tried and failed. And persons who give up spontaneously, cold turkey, on their own, have only a one in six chance of being successful.

Better results are normally achieved with the aid of therapy, drugs and group withdrawal programs.

One of the most durable programs locally is the Five Day Plan offered at the Health Education Centre, 3019 Shakespeare.

Introduced in Victoria seven years ago and sponsored by the Seventh Day Adventist Church, it involves five consecutive evenings of films, lectures and group discussions. The cost is $20.

Dr. Herb Domke, a member of the centre, says between 250 to 300 persons go through the program each year. He says the initial success rate is 80 to 95 per cent; after six months, 50 to 60 per cent.

The impetus to kick the habit has driven persons to seek out other kinds of "cures" such as hypnotism and acupuncture.

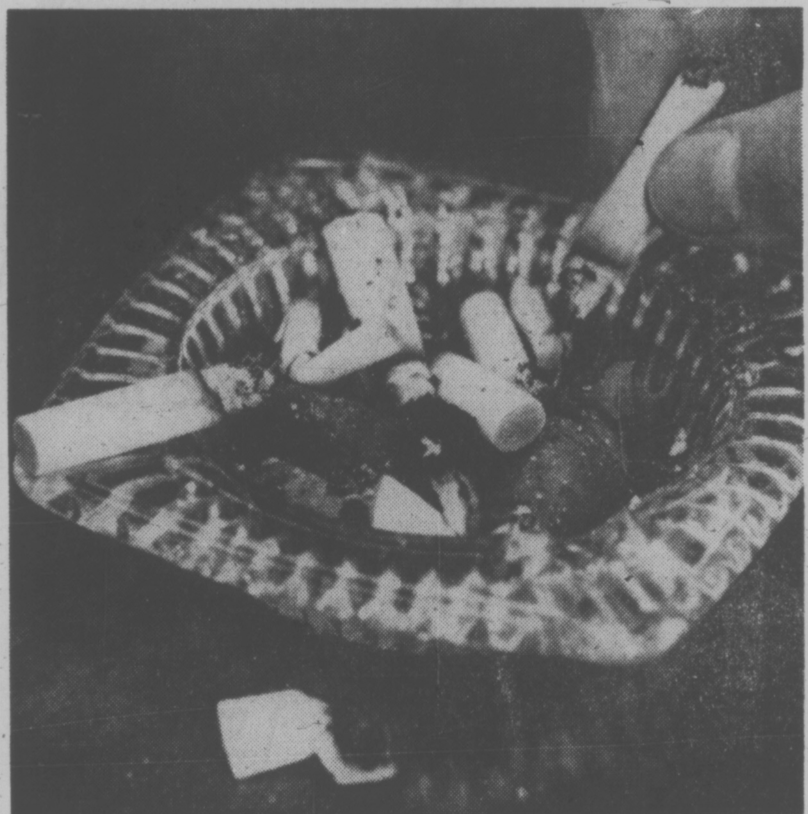
Jean Kozocari, a Victoria parapsychologist says she frequently uses hypnotism in helping people stop smoking and has found it highly effective. The catch is not everyone can be hypnotized.

Acupuncturist Dr. Harold Saita, of Victoria, treats smokers by pricking their ear lobes with a needle and then placing in the spot a small ionized silver pellet attached to the skin by adhesive tape.

When the person feels the urge to smoke he gently rubs his ears. The tape and pellet last a week or month but eventually fall off. By then it is assumed the smoker is no longer a smoker.

Regional health educator Ken Ainslie says the biggest hurdle is motivating people to do something about their smoking habit.

"It seems because of our political system perhaps, we are geared to persist in doing the things we know are bad until we're told absolutely to stop," he says.



Cigarettes: Health hazard lucrative for government

Building 'Bungled'

The renovated Law Courts Building on Burdett Avenue isn't completed yet so it's too soon to have its own ghosts — but it is gathering its own horror stories.

Horror stories about bureaucratic bungling, about three-walled rooms and bookshelves which keep going to Vancouver to be painted.

Cecil Branson, president of the Victoria Bar Association said today the stories come from people working in the building who he believes to be sincere.

The case of the travelling bookshelves, for example, involved in moving the law library from the first to fourth floors.

Someone in the provincial department of public works decreed the metal bookshelves would be painted before they were relocated, Branson was told. For some reason he has never heard it had to be done in Vancouver.

So off half of them went, to return later. The paint started to peel. Back they went to Vancouver to be redone. Back again and this time they were somehow pitted.

Branson has heard, although he stresses he has not been able to confirm, that painting of bookshelves has run to $30,000.

About the room with just three walls. He explained that there used to be a barrister's lounge located alongside the law library. For convenience a door between the two was added, spring-loaded so it closed automatically and lawyers in the lounge didn't disturb those working in the library.

On the ground floor it worked well.

But when the lounge was created alongside the library on the fourth floor, those designing it used just three walls. Bookshelves, which did not reach to the ceiling, were used to form the separating wall.

No one was happy. Lawyers meeting in the lounge didn't have privacy. Lawyers working in the library didn't have quiet.

Branson said complaints have got that problem fixed. Meanwhile other issues raised by the bar association in a rare public blast last month have so far produced nothing but promises.

In a 10-page brief the association attacked the government's lack of concern over mixing the judiciary and executive arm of law enforcement by giving Crown counsel office space in the enlarged building.

The lawyers said millions of dollars appear to have been wasted as the work dragged on and they were also irked by repeated instances of senior members of the attorney-general's department assuring them of one course of action and taking another.

Deputy Attorney-General David Vickers promised to get back to him in a week or so after the brief, Branson said. That has stretched to almost a month and Branson said he can't reach Vickers.

'TWAS A BIG BLAST

Cause of the explosion, police said, was diesel oil being thrown on a bonfire of crates and boxes being burned on property of Vantreight Farms.

Gems Not Such Great Buys

A number of Victoria-area residents and businessmen are believed to have lost money through buying diamonds from two Toronto firms whose officials have been charged with fraud.

Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall said Friday London House Bullion and Diamond Dealers, and Merchant Diamond Group Ltd., are known to have solicited here.

The majority of the calls were made to Victoria businessmen.

He said the two are among several eastern Canadian firms that staged a telephone campaign offering diamonds for sale as an investment.

Tindall said in the past year the bureau received more than 100 reports of such calls.

"Based on that, I'd imagine there are a substantial number of people in Lower Vancouver Island who took the firms up on their offer," Tindall said.

Last September the Vancouver BBB warned the public to be cautious in dealing with London House and Merchant Diamond Group following reports the firms were appraising the diamonds considerately above the market value.

The BBB cited one example of a person who bought a package of diamonds from Merchant Diamond Group for $1,450 after being told the appraised value was $1,795.

Tindall said several other firms have been operating here as well.

Tindall said the man paid $6,000 for a package of diamonds which the firm appraised at about $8,000. But a local expert said the gems were worth only $700.

Tindall said the firms contacted persons here directly by phone from Toronto and Montreal.

But, Tindall said, some firms misrepresented the investment potential, by saying diamonds were appreciating at the rate of 40 per cent a year. In actual fact, he said, the appreciation is about 10 per cent.

Orders had to be pre-paid but there was no problem about delivery, Tindall said.

Tindall said the firms indicated in their advertisements that the appraised value they set on the gems was for insurance purposes only, and bore no relationship to actual market value.

The charges against the officials of London House and Merchant Diamond Group came after a lengthy RCMP investigation into the firms' activities.

Eleven Toronto men have been charged with conspiracy to defraud the public, defrauding the public and making use of the mails to defraud the public.

Tindall said anyone who has bought diamonds through mail order schemes should get a proper appraisal of the gems by a qualified gemologist.

If there is wide discrepancy, Tindall said, the person should contact RCMP.

River Project Safe for Fish

Greater Victoria Water Commissioner Ronald Upward has denied claims by conservationists that the planned diversion of Leech River into Sooke Lake will hurt salmon runs.

Upward said the diversion will be at a spot three miles upstream from Sooke just above a 15-foot waterfall.

"Very, very few fish would come this far upstream," he said.

Upward said every possible conservation angle will be looked into before any decision is made.

"You don't just barge in with a project anymore without getting expert advice on the possible detrimental effects," he said.

The diversion is planned to increase the water supply for the Greater Victoria area and is projected to cost $5 million.

It hasn't been decided yet whether to build a tunnel or pipeline but Upward suggests it will probably be the latter.

He said a five-mile long, 66-inch pipeline could be constructed in less than 12 months while a tunnel would take up to five years.

Randle Just Ran Out Of Cheeks to Turn

One week's work, and a few days before manager Frank Lucchesi of Texas Rangers was punched by second-baseman Lenny Randle, fracturing his cheekbone, Lucchesi was quoted: "I'm tired of these punks saying play me or trade me. Anyone who makes $80,000 a year and gripes and moans all spring is not going to get a tear out of me," And here's what Randle said after the punching. "I guess he took it for granted I was a pacifist. I just ran out of cheeks to turn." Or maybe you like the one by Ken Reitz of the St. Louis Cardinals after trades had sent him from St. Louis to San Francisco and back to the Cardinals in one year, when discussing the profits he made in buying and selling homes. "I made more money in real estate than I did in baseball."

And now it seems that Victoria's international gymnast Philip Delasalle did even better on his recent Russian trip than reported at the time. Philip, who was fifth allround at Riga, placing ahead of Olympic bronze medal winners Henri Boerio of France and Eberhard Geinger of West Germany, also placed fifth in the high bar finals. But his biggest moment came when he received his first international gold medal on the pommel horse. Earlier at Moscow, he had won the silver medal on the pommel horse. At Riga, coach John Herb reports, Philip beat most of the gymnasts who finished ahead of him at the Montreal Olympics.

Obviously Philip has improved tremendously since the summer Olympics and gets his next taste of international competition at London this weekend. And Herb now feels perhaps Philip has a chance for better things; but he is also worried. Because, with the Commonwealth games coming up at Edmonton in 1978 and the next Olympics in Moscow in 1980, he wonders how Philip can continue to make out without any aid, and he asks: "How can a young man train 6-8 hours a day until 1980 without support?" It's a good question, and if anyone can answer it Herb would be only too willing to listen.

The lacrosse season is just around the next corner and already all the clubs in the Western Lacrosse Association appear to be improving from last year. Coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks was saying this week that one of the teams to beware of could be Coquitlam Adanacs. The A's barely beat out Nanaimo for fourth place last season, but Dillon feels they are a greatly improved club this year. And with Nanaimo now having the Alexanders and expecting import help from the East shortly, maybe the other three clubs can expect a problem this season. But it could be a happy problem. For a tight, five-team race would do wonders for the sport and, with the Mann Cup to be played in the West as the prize at the end of the trail, watch for a real dog-fight during the regular season.

And incidentally, one of the Shamrocks omitted from an earlier list this week was Gordie Nielson who started with the Rocks last season, but opted out after a few games. Dillon feels he too can help the club . . . And it should be interesting indeed in the next few weeks to see who does, and who doesn't make the final list of 21 . . . Certainly the situation appears rosier than in years past . . .

★ ★ ★

Moose Slick With a Stick

Picking time when attention of officials is elsewhere, Andre (Moose) Dupont of Philadelphia Flyers performs some slick work with stick during National Hockey League playoff game Friday night in Toronto. Dupont lifts foot of Toronto's Dave Williams (22) off ice during first-period attack by Maple Leafs. Flyers went on to score 4-3 victory in overtime. (CP Wirephoto)

Fights Are Part of It; So Are Goals, Assists

HOUSTON (AP) — Centre Terry Ruskowski of Houston Aeros admits that hockey is a physical sport and fights are just a part of the game.

Ruskowski, Houston's leading scorer during the regular World Hockey Association season, was tagged with three major penalties for fighting but managed to score a goal and two assists as the Aeros downed Edmonton Oilers 6-2 Friday night in their WHA quarter-final playoff series.

The victory gives Houston a 2-0 advantage over the Oilers as the series resumes at Edmonton on Sunday.

The other three quarter-finals go again tonight as Quebec Nordiques, with a 2-0 lead, meet New England Whalers at Hartford, Conn.; Indianapolis Racers use their 3-0 advantage against Cincinnati Stingers at Indianapolis and Winnipeg Jets take their 2-0 lead into San Diego against the Mariners.

"You have to expect a little fighting now and then," Ruskowski said. "I was just happy to get the win."

Ruskowski, 22, wasted no time in displaying his aggressive style as he and Ron Busniuk of the Oilers each drew major penalties for fighting just nine seconds into the game.

The pair battled again late in the second period and were saddled with major penalties once more. Greg Boddy and Ruskowski tangled in the third period and Ruskowski drew an automatic game misconduct for being slapped with his third major penalty of the game.

"They (Oilers) know I play an aggressive style of hockey," said Ruskowski. "But I can't say if they were trying to get me out of the game or not."

Don Larway's unassisted goal at the 10:59 mark of the first period lifted Houston into a 1-0 lead, but Brett Callighen connected with a short-handed goal just 92 seconds into the second period to tie the score.

The Aeros responded with three unanswered goals in the same epriod by Al McLeod, Marty Howe and Rich Preston.

Ruskowski then scored his first goal of the playoffs on a 20-foot wrist shot early in the third period. Callighen came back with his second goal of the game for Edmonton just two minutes later but the Oilers were not able to get any closer as Cam Connor scored a late goal for Houston.

"He (Ruskowski) and Mark Howe are the keys to their team," said Edmonton player-coach Glen Sather. "He is a great little hockey player.

"We're down but not out. We expect to win all three games at home, and if we can do that and take a game here, we'll be in good shape."

JoJo Just Great In Familiar Task

JoJo White was forced to carry Boston's backcourt attack for most of the National Basketball Association season. He had to do the same thing Friday night against San Antonio Spurs, and he didn't let the Celtics offence down.

White scored 38 points, hitting 15-of-19 from the field—including 11 in a row in one stretch—to lead the Celtics to a 113-109 victory over the Spurs. Boston moves into the quarter-finals of the NBA playoffs against Philadelphia '76ers, winning the best-of-three series against the Spurs 2-0.

During most of the season, White had to pick up the slack when fellow guard Charlie Scott was sidelined with a broken arm. Friday night, Scott was thumbed out of the game with 4:20 left in the third period by rookie referee Roger McCann. Scott was slapped with two technical fouls and automatic expulsion for excessive arguing.

"We're just a better ball club, but White was the difference," said Boston coach Tommy Heinsohn. "He kept us going. He was the difference when we lost Charlie."

The other three playoffs are tied 1-1 with the critical games set for Sunday.

Campy Russell scored 22 points and Foots Walker contributed 20 to lead the fired-up Cleveland Cavaliers to a 91-83 victory over Washington Bullets.

Mickey Johnson, Artis Gilmore and Wilbur Holland combined for 13 points in the final five minutes to lift Chicago Bulls to a 107-104 triumph over Portland Trail Blazers.

Golden State Warriors crushed Detroit Pistons 138-108 Thursday night to even that series at a game apiece.

Final Seconds Good to Flyers But Not Kings

By The Canadian Press

Coach Bob Pulford was speechless. His Los Angeles Kings, struggling for survival in the National Hockey League playoffs, fell 13 seconds short of an overtime period which might have changed their fortunes against Boston Bruins Friday night.

Instead, the Bruins stormed back from 3-1 and 5-3 deficits for a 7-6 victory and their third consecutive triumph in the best-of-seven preliminary-round quarter-final series.

Rookie Stan Jonathan scored the winner with 13 seconds remaining, just one minute and 42 seconds after Marcel Dionne's breakaway goal had given the Kings a 6-6 tie.

"We had them 5-3 in the second period and we let them score four goals in the third," said the Kings 'Mike Murphy after scoring a goal and setting up three others. "It was a complete mental letdown on everyone's part. We played like we expected them to catch up."

A Boston victory at Los Angeles in game four Sunday night will clinch the series for the Bruins.

The same prospect also faces Buffalo Sabres, who squandered a 2-0 lead in a 4-3 loss to New York Islanders in the third game of their quarter-final at Buffalo.

Philadelphia Flyers improved their position, however, fighting back to beat the Maple Leafs 4-3 in overtime and cut Toronto's edge in games to 2-1. Montreal Canadiens and St. Louis Blues play the third game of their series tonight in St. Louis with the Canadiens leading 2-0.

Jonathan's game-winning goal bounced into the net off the glove of Kings' goalie Rogie Vachon following a scramble in front of the net.

Bobby Schmautz scored two goals, the second just 10 seconds into the third period, to raise his goal total for the three games to seven on eight shots. Don Marcotte also scored two goals for Boston.

The Islanders' captain Clark Gillies scored his fourth game-winning goal in his team's last four playoff games, giving New York its third straight victory in the series and its seventh straight over Buffalo stretching back to last year.

The Sabres took a 2-0 first-period lead for the second straight game on power-play goals by Rick Martin and Jerry Korab. But the relentless Islanders' attack wore down the Buffalo defence and produced two goals by Jude Drouin and another by Billy Harris. Gillies added the fourth goal, which turned out to be the winner when Don Luce made it 4-3 with nine minutes and 50 seconds left in the game.

Philadelphia's Rick MacLeish tied the game with his team's net empty and just 38 seconds remaining in regulation time. He ended the extra session abruptly, scoring at 2:55.

"We have no excuses for losing now," said Philadelphia coach Fred Shero, whose team had fallen behind 2-0 in the first period. "We deserved to win. We played well. I feel we have the best club we've ever had in our history. There's no reason why we couldn't come back."

"We're getting stronger every game," added Philadelphia centre Bobby Clarke after the Flyers had broken a six-game playoff losing streak.

Detroit Choice Disturbs Howe

DETROIT (AP) — Gordie Howe, former Detroit Red Wings great, is upset because he thinks he should have been offered the National Hockey League team's job as general manager instead of former teammate Ted Lindsay.

"Lindsay got a job I could possibly have filled," Howe says in an interview in the Detroit News. "That kicked hell out of my position with the organization. Up to them we had talked to Bruce Norris (Red Wings owner). We presented our thoughts to him. But they brought him (Lindsay) in and blew a hole in our proposals."

The Wings have been trying to sign Howe, their all-time scoring leader, and his sons Marty and Mark. The three are playing out their contracts with Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association. Detroit has obtained NHL rights to Marty, a defenceman, but Boston Bruins control the NHL rights to Mark, a forward.

The Howes want to play together and both Detroit and Boston have been negotiating for their services as a package.

"Ted said he's definitely not going to give up the No. 1 amateur draft choice for Mark," Gordie said. "Well, that's his second mistake. His first mistake was ripping us."

He described his friendship with Lindsay, who took over the general manager's job last month, as "tainted."

Lindsay has balked at meeting the Bruins' request that the rights to Mark be exchanged for Detroit's top draft pick.

Lindsay has been critical of Gordie's wife Colleen, who manages the family's business affairs and who insisted the Howes would not play unless they received their pay from the Aeros when cheques for other members of the team were delayed. Having the Howes in Detroit might be a disruptive influence on Red Wings organization, Lindsay has said.

Hockey Series 'That Will Please Everybody'

PRAGUE (CP) — Alan Eagleson says he is planning on more international hockey tournaments within the next few years including another Canada Cup for 1980.

"I can't see that the world championship as now structured would have as great an impact on hockey," said the chairman of international hockey for Canada.

Eagleson, a Toronto lawyer who is also executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said it's too difficult not only for Canada but also for Sweden and Finland to bring their best players together while Stanley Cup and World Hockey Association playoffs are going on.

"I'm hopeful that over the next three years we can structure a series of tournaments that will please everybody in hockey — the WHA, the NHL, the International Ice Hockey Federation and most of all, Canadian hockey fans."

Eagleson, one of the officials in charge of last fall's Canada Cup tournament involving Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union Finland, Sweden, the United States and Canada, said Guenther Sabetzki of West Germany, president of the IIHF, has other suggestions.

Sabetzki is interested in a min-tournament involving the NHL, WHA and European champions plus the European runner-up.

Eagleson joined Team Canada on its European tour Tuesday and was on hand when the Canadians defeated West Germany 8-1 in Duesseldorf and 3-2 in Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

DENVER (AP) — Murray Armstrong, one of the nation's most successful hockey coaches, is retiring after 21 years at the University of Denver. Armstrong, 61, has compiled a 462-216-31 record and won five national championships, seven Western Collegiate Hockey Association titles and a share of another. A native of Manor, Sask., Armstrong played pro hockey for 10 years with Regina Rovers of the Western Hockey League and Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings and New York Americans of the National Hockey League.

MONTREAL (CP) — Defenceman Larry Robinson of Montreal Canadiens said Friday that his lawyer will listen to any offer made by Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association.

"If the Bulls want to talk my lawyers will listen," said Robinson, who has not signed a contract with the Canadiens for the 1977-78 National Hockey League season. "But I think before we consider an offer from a team in the WHA, we have to make sure that there are some guarantees."

Art Kaminsky of New York, who represents Robinson, said Thursday night he sees no difficulty negotiating a contract with Montreal.

"There are still a few minor points to be finalized," he said. "I don't see any difficulty getting a new deal here because I am sure the Canadiens are interested in keeping Robinson here."

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Pickets protesting Sough Africa's participation in the Davis Cup zone finals carried signs saying "Go Home" and the United States team co-operated by sweeping the first two singles matches Friday, virtually assuring over-all victory.

Roscoe Tanner won the final four points to take the first singles match from Byron Bertram 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4 and Brian Gottfried dominated his match against Ray Moore 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

The two triumphs left the United States just one short of victory in the best-of-five competition with a doubles match scheduled today and two more singles matches Sunday. Pickets appeared shortly before the start of the matches carrying signs, some reading, "Stop the U.S.-South Africa Davis Cup" and "Racists Go Home."

Fans Jam Stadium To See Expos Lose

Baseball made its debut in Montreal's Olympic Stadium Friday afternoon and the largest crowd ever to watch a baseball game in Canada — 57,592 — watched Philadelphia Phillies hammer Montreal Expos 7-2 for their first win in five starts in the 1977 National League season.

"This place is a lot better than Jarry Park for one thing," said manager Danny Ozark after Jay Johnstone socked a two-run double and Greg Luzinski smashed a two-run homer to lead the Philadelphia triumph.

"If anything, in the daytime it is difficult for us to see where the ball is hit," said Ozark. "I would imagine the fans on the third-base side might have the same difficulty. Other than that I think it's an excellent place. It's a great addition for Montreal.

"Not one of my fielders said anything about having difficulty seeing the ball out of the crowd. The players saw the ball well, both at the plate and in the field. Nobody came in and said they couldn't see the ball or see a particular pitch.

"To have 57,000 people come out here with the Montreal Canadiens playing in their Stanley Cup playoffs, it should prove that Montreal is not only a great hockey city but also a great baseball city."

Meanwhile Expos' manager Dick Williams, while disappointed with the loss, said that he had heard little in the way of complaining about the park from his players.

In other National League games, Atlanta Braves edged Houston Astros 4-3 in their home opener, Los Angeles Dodgers routed San Francisco Giants 7-1, Chicago Cubs turned back New York Mets 8-4, Pittsburgh Pirates pounded St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 and Cincinnati Reds whipped San Diego Padres 9-5.

"I thought our show was as good as Ted Turner's," said manager Dave Bristol of his Atlanta Braves.

The Braves show lasted a little longer than owner Turner's pre-game extravaganza and it produced Atlanta's victory over the sizzling Astros in the Braves home debut.

Pitcher Dick Ruthven, 2-0, drove in the game-winning run with a two-out double in the sixth inning and reliever Rick Camp settled the issue when he worked out of bases-loaded jams in the seventh and eighth.

Houston, leading the National League West, saw its three-game winning streak end before an enthusiastic crowd of 46,469 which sat through an hour-long pre-game ceremony that featured the retiring of Hank Aaron's jersey No. 44.

Canada's other major league team also took a tumble Friday.

Toronto Blue Jays, who surprised the experts by winning five of their first seven games, played their first game on the road, their first under light and their first on natural grass.

They seemed to be taking the new things in stride as they built up a 5-0 lead against the White Sox in Chicago. Then the roof fell in on the Jays and the Sox charged from behind for a 7-5 triumph, wrapping up the decision with a five-run outburst in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Seattle Mariners also played on the road for the first time.

Pair of Flyers Fined in Court

TORONTO (CP) — Hockey players Joe Watson and Bob Kelly of Philadelphia Flyers were fined in county court Friday after pleading guilty to charges of common assault arising from National Hockey League playoff games last year.

Watson pleaded guilty to common assault during a game on April 15, when his hockey stick hit Constable Arthur Malloy of the Metropolitan Toronto police force during an off-ice brawl at a game against Toronto Maple Leafs. He was sentenced to a fine of $750 with the option of 30 days in jail.

Kelly threw his glove and hit Janice Brown, an usher at Maple Leaf Gardens, on April 22. He was fined $200 with the option of five days in jail.

The two had originally been charged with assault causing bodily harm but pleaded guilty to the lesser charges.

Judge Hugh Locke said the players were "paid gladiators" in an arena and said it is often their employers "who like to stir up the excitement."

He turned down the request of Crown counsel Robert McGee that Watson and Kelly be put on probation, telling McGee that both men now have criminal records and can expect to be treated like anyone else if they break the law again.

McGee had called the offences "a flagrant breach" of the Criminal Code.

The court was told that the Flyers had been heckled by Leafs fans during the two playoff games last year.

McGee said in an interview that charges against two other Flyers, Don Saleski and Mel Bridgman, have, in effect, been dropped. He said the charges have been stayed and it is unlikely that any more action against the two will be initiated.

Batch of Bogies Cuts Lead to One

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Four bogies on the back side destroyed Mary Lou Crocker's hopes Friday of another sub-par round and cut her lead to one strike midway through the second annual women's international golf tournament.

Crocker's one-over-par 73, coupled with Thursday's six-under 66, gave the Louisville, Ky., pro a 36-hole total of 139, five under par.

Moving into second place after another two-under round was England's Michelle Walker, making a strong bid for her first pro victory in the United States.

Jan Stephenson the Australian now living in Palm Springs, Calif., dropped from second to third with Friday's round of 73, which gave her a two-day total 141.

Tied for fourth place with totals of 142 were Amy Alcott of Santa Monica, Calif., and Sandra Palmer of Fort Worth, Tex.

Sally Little, the South African who won the first International last year, had an even-par 72 Friday and was tied for sixth at 143 with Silvia Bertolaccini of Houston, Tex., and Kathy McMullen of Holmes Beach, Fla.

The biggest winners on the LPGA tour Judy Rankin and Kathy Whitworth, were bunched with four other players with even-par totals of 144, five strokes off the pace.

TIMBERMEN ACQUIRE ANOTHER GOALIE

Nanaimo Timbermen will be deep on goaltending when they open their Western Lacrosse Association season early next month.

Timbermen announced Friday the signing of Tim Berry, a tall, 200-pounder who played last season with Peterborough in the Ontario Lacrosse Association.

Berry, 23, performed as a professional in the 1975 season, playing with Long Island Tomahawks in the former National League.

Also on the Nanaimo list of goaltenders are holdover John Lewis and rookie Al Radley, who helped Victoria McDonalds to the national junior championship last season.

Californian Leading Tallahassee Tourney

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) Californian Jack Ewing matched an opening day 68 for an eight-under-par 36 to take the second-round lead by a single stroke over Florida's Wally Armstrong in the Tallahassee Open golf tournament Friday.

Armstrong also fired a four-under-par 68, but he started the day one stroke behind Ewing and four others.

His 36-hole total was 137.

The day's best rounds in the $80,000 Professional Golfers Association tour event, however, belonged to South African Bobby Cole, 35-year-old Bob Wolf of Dixon, Tenn., and Larry Nelson of Kennesaw, Ga., wo racked up 67s.

Wolf is playing in his third tournament and made the 36-hole cut for the first time.

Ed Sneed, of Pompano Beach, Fla., was hard on the heels of Armstrong after shooting a two-under-par 70 to go with his first round 68 for a 138 total.

Stargell Suffers From Dizziness

PITTSBURGH (AP) — First baseman Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates, bothered by headaches and dizziness recently, will be admitted to hospital for tests.

A spokesman for the National League baseball team said Stargell will be placed on the 15-day disabled list while he is in hospital.

Effect of Masters Now Has Vanished

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus makes no secret of the fact he really didn't want to play in the $225,000 Tournament of Champions golf tournament.

"I never want to play, really feel ready to play, the week after one of the majors," said Nicklaus, who just missed in a final-round drive last week in the Masters.

He said he came to this posh resort only because "the Tournament of Champions is too important an event to skip two years in a row."

"If it had a different place on the schedule, some place other than the week after the Masters, it could be one of the great tournaments we play."

But now, in second place three strokes back of longshot Bob Wynn after two rounds, his interest is piqued.

"It's really not a matter of interest," Nicklaus said after an erratic, three-under-par 69 gave him a 140 total, four under par on the 6,855-yard La Costa Country Club course.

"It's a question of working to make yourself play. From this point on, there will be no Masters effect."

Wynn, at 37 one of the record 12 first-timers in this event that brings together only the winners of regular-tour titles from the last 12 months, birdied all four of the par-five holes on his way to a 67 and a 137 total.

The late-blooming Wynn turned pro when he was 19 but spent most of the next decade in various jobs around golf shops, plus a stint in the U.S. military, and didn't join the tour until he was almost 30.

He then waited until last year, at age 36, to win his first title, in the B.C. Open, and gain his spot in this event.

He's won most of his season's total $6,944 with solid performances in the last three weeks after he started fading the ball off the tee.

One shot back of Nicklaus and tied for third at 141 were Tournament of Champions rookies Gary Koch and Bruce Lietzke, along with British Open champ Johnny Miller. Ray Floyd, who tied Miller for the first-round lead, quickly moved out to a two-shot advantage Friday then blew it all with a quadruple-bogey seven on the par-three seventh, where he pumped two in the pond.

English Boys Win

Mount Douglas Mountainmen turned in a determined effort on the school pitch Friday before dropping a 24-14 decision to a touring English side in a high school rugby match.

Going against the strong Sponne School team, the Mountainmen grabbed an early 4-0 lead, trailed 14.4 at the half and came out charging after the intermission to pull into a 14-14 deadlock.

It was downhill the rest of the way for the Mountainmen as the well-drilled visitors regained control and cruised to the victory.

Sponne collected its points on five tries and two conversions while the host squad scored three tries and one conversion.

Another exhibition match involving a touring team was played Thursday in Vancouver. In that one, Pat Trewlawny of Oak Bay booted a pair of penalty goals to give the B.C. President's side a 6-3 triumph over Cheshire of England.

A one-day umpires clinic will be held April 23 at Lambrick Park. Registrations will be taken at 9 a.m. and the clinic will wind up at 4:30.

Instructors include BCUA president Doug Hudlin, Leo Burns, district president Chuck Blaikie and Bill Murphy. Novices are especially urged to attend.

Blue Jays Sign Canadian Player

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Blue Jays have signed Maritimer Paul Hodgson to a professional contract, the American League baseball team said Thursday. Hodgson, a six-foot-one, 185 pounder from Fredericton, will report to the Jays' Class A farm club at Utica, N.Y., in the New York-Penn League in June.

Calgarians Lead Series

VANCOUVER (CP) — Calgary Canucks downed Richmond Sockeyes 5-3 Friday to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final Centennial Cup junior hockey playoff.

Fourth game is Sunday in Calgary.

Richmond led 1-0 after the first period on a goal from Barry Geboult, but Calgary moved ahead 4-1 after 40 minutes on goals by Dennis May, Garth Morgan, Tony Stiles and Murray Scalf.

Robin Laycock scored an insurance goal for the Canucks in the final period as Bruce Mathers and Roy Heaton added markers for the Sockeyes.

Ancient Lifestyle Is Pieced Together

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The Bodo man isn't much to look at—a lump of fossilized human skull, low-browed, with two gaping dark holes as eye sockets. But he is about one-half to three-quarters of a million years old.

To Jon Kalb, a 35-year-old Texas geologist who heads a research team digging up fossils in a remote area of Ethiopia, his discovery last October is significant in piecing together the evolutionary history of early man.

The skull, which belonged to the species homo erectus, the immediate ancestor of modern man, is not the oldest specimen of its type to be discovered. More ancient but less complete skulls have been found in neighboring Kenya and in Tanzania, further south in East Africa.

The Bodo man is unique, said Kalb, because "this is the first time this particular type of human has been found in association with abundant stone tools."

This should allow his researchers, 16 scientists from six United States universities and graduate students from Addis Ababa University, to piece together the Bodo man's lifestyle of hundreds of thousands of years ago, he said.

"He made his camp next to the water's edge and killed animals in the water," Kalb said. "He made his tools from nearby volcanic rock."

Kalb and his team have uncovered what he thinks is going to become "one of the most important sites in the world in terms of early man and fossil tools."

The discovery was made in Ethiopia's northeast Harrar province in the Bodo area, inhabited by Afar tribesmen who follow a precarious existence battered by raging winds, torrential rains and high temperatures.

Kalb said that because of the geological structure of the area it contains within one basin a sequence of fossil beds stretching back six million years.

The team, which has been operating for less than three years, had collected an abundance of fossil tools, in addition to sections of fossilized animals—all of them of extinct varieties—before the Bodo man was spotted.

Alemayehu Asfar, from Ethiopia's ministry of culture, sports and youth, who is the government's official representative working with the mission, had made a significant contribution on the day of the Bodo man's discovery by picking up a fossilized baboon molar from the ground. He handed it to paleontologist Dr. Charles Smart, of Princeton University.

As Smart was inspecting it only a few yards from the base camp, Asfar spotted the lower section of the Bodo man's skull lying on the ground, partly hidden by grass.

An upper portion of the skull later was found nearby by Yale University paleonthropologist Paul Whitehead. A further search uncovered 75 other associated fragments of the Bodo man's skull, which are being glued together at Ethiopia's national museum in Addis Ababa.

Kalb hopes future visits to the fossil site will disclose other fragments that will eventually result in the reconstruction of 53 per cent of the skull.

Fossils that are pre-man, known as hominoids, dating back 12 million to 14 million years have been found in the Indian sub-continent and of the same species going back 5.5 million years in East Africa.

But the "missing link" between pre-man and modern man's immediate ancestors such as the Bodo man, has never been found. Kalb hopes to find remains bridging the gap.

Changing Roles Beats Boredom

OTTAWA (CP) — After 31 years as a housewife, Shirley Henderson now is working and her husband Ray is keeping house.

Mrs. Henderson had several reasons for changing the traditional roles, but the main one was boredom.

"I thought it was important for me to go out into the world again," she said.

"I wanted to see what society was all about. I was comfortable at home, but I was bored."

Mrs. Henderson studied tyyping and shorthand at Algonquin College and now is a clerk-typist at the department of external affairs. She did not have a career before marriage.

Henderson, a former RCAF wing commander turned computer salesman, suffered a heart attack last fall. His doctor recommended he take up something less strenuous.

He has since found that being a househusband and caring for five people has its own pressures and his impressions about housewives and their frustrations have changed.

"I find having to get everything in and make sure there's always enough food to prepare a good meal and keeping up with the vacuuming, dusting and laundry have given me a different outlook entirely on 'women's work'."

Dealing with household finances was another eye-opener.

"I had no idea how expensive food is until I started doing this. Now I know what all those budgets over the years were all about."

Three of their five children are still at home and Margaret, 18, Jack, 26, and Ann, 14, do their shars of housework.

Mrs. Henderson seems to have settled into her new career and said she feels what she gained was worth what she gave up, even though she has left behind some of her friends.

"I don't have time any more to be active in the women's auxiliary at the church or curling and other sports I used to do during the day."

Eventually she would like to go to university—"I think I would study philosophy and history."

Films Follow His Research

TORONTO (CP) — Whenever Jake Pauls takes up a new research project it seems that someone makes a movie about it.

Pauls, an architect in the building research division of the National Research Council, was studying how persons respond to fire emergencies in multistorey buildings a few years ago.

Then came the movie Towering Inferno.

Now he's working on the more general problem of how to get a large number of persons out of a building in a hurry.

A movie called Two-Minute Warning, in which throngs of football fans stampede out of a stadium after a sniper goes on a killing spree, was made.

Pauls has studied grandstands in Calgary, Ottawa and Toronto. He also has studied crowd movement at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and was asked to advise organizers of the Montreal Olympics.

Studies have shown that humans are not as panicky in emergencies as Hollywood movie-makers would have us believe, he said.

"People actually respond very well."

For example, in movie theatres the continental style of arranging seats is better than the aisle system most frequently used in Canada and the United States, he said.

The continental system involves rows of seats stretching from one wall to the other. There are no aisles but the rows are spaced far enough apart that persons can walk easily between them, even when others are sitting in their seats.

At the National Arts Centre both seating arrangements are used. The Opera, with continental seating clears more rapidly and smoothly than the Theatre, which is smaller but has an aisle system,' he said.

Pauls said more sophisticated fire alarm systems are needed in apartment buildings.

The use of simple alarms dates back to when buildings were smaller and less complex and the possibility of a fire spreading was great.

In modern buildings, fires are usually confined near their origins. Thus, many tenants might well be justified in not rushing down the stairs every time the alarm goes off.

Youth Protest Playground Loss

UMEA, Sweden (AP) — At least 80 youths were seized when a police force moved in Thursday to clear a grove, occupied by about 300 young demonstrators. The 100-man police force met resistence from the youths, whose ages varied from eight upwards. About 30 of the youths will face trials, police said. They were protesting a local government's decision to build a school in the grove, which has been their playground for years.

Moscow Eyeing Parking Meters

MOSCOW (AP) — Growing numbers of cars, a high accident rate and dire warnings from safety officials are finally forcing city officials to do something about Moscow's traffic conditions.

Police indicate they may even import parking meters to reduce the number of automobiles on the streets.

Traffic officials are putting strict limits on trucks entering the city centre, where roads are narrow and traffic to the Kremlin and government ministries is heavy. The capital's 750 traffic lights are being linked to a Western-style computer network and new signs are going up to explain the tunnels, overpasses and lane arrangements that make some intersections difficult to navigate.

"If we don't take measures now, then in several years, even with a broadening of the road network, the city will face an extreme problem of overloaded roads," Moscow's chief traffic cop, Maj.-Gen. A. Nozdryakov said late last year.

About 350,000 cars squeeze daily through Moscow's 2,100 miles of streets, which range from eight-lane boulevards to little more than alleys.

The number of passenger cars is expected to double by 1980, even though a car costs the equivalent of $7,000 or more and there is a waiting list to get one. The average Soviet wage is equal to $2,300 a year.

As the number of automobiles grows, the traffic casualty rate is apparently remaining high. The last statistics issued were for 1972, when 500 people died in Moscow accidents.

Regular and auxiliary police patrols at intersections are being increased, particularly in hazardous weather. Although any kind of tragedy usually is ignored by the Soviet press, the popular newspaper Evening Moscow regularly carries accounts of traffic accidents.

The latest campaign to solve traffic problems follows several measures taken in 1975, when the city speed limit was lowered from 50 to 37 m.p.h.

They also required every car to have a first-aid kit, a fire extinguisher and seat belts and introduced American-made "radar pistols" to trap speeders.

This time there is a heavy emphasis on technology, like the traffic computer system, and on reducing truck traffic. A recent government study found that 16 per cent of downtown truck traffic consists of trucks carrying nothing — either on their way to jobs or being used for private purposes by their drivers.

Police hope to consolidate shipments going in and out of the downtown area in as few trucks as possible.

For the individual auto owner, parking lots will be set up outside the Sadovaya Ring Road that encircles down town. Police hope drivers will park there and use public transport in the city centre.

Traffic hazards include large numbers of potholes, along with manhole covers that rise above road level and can be hard on tires. Moscow has few left turns off major thoroughfares and a large number of one-way streets.

Street signs are improving rapidly, particularly on main streets. But there are no road maps that show anything beyond the most important streets. Chauffeurs and truck drivers, who have to know the city by heart, often make substantially more money than other Soviet workers.

Some traffic problems are probably beyond the power of police to resolve. The large amount of construction—particularly of new housing—requires heavy truck traffic everywhere. Long flatbed trucks carrying girders and whole walls of prefabricated buildings are a common sight, inching along heavily travelled roads.

Government and Communist party leaders complicate traffic by whisking around the city in special motorcades. When an important foreign visitor comes, whole main roads are closed for his ceremonial arrival despite the effect on traffic nearby.

Canadian Publishers 'Impose Difficulties'

SUDBURY (CP) — The Canadian book publishing market imposes difficulties on new authors seeking to get their work into print, said Geoffrey Gillett during a visit here to promote his first book The Afghan Tree.

The manager of engineering for supply and distribution at the Toronto headquarters of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., Gillett ventured into the field of writing two years ago.

"I was frustrated with life—the middle-age syndrome . . . I had just come back from (a job in) Germany . . . and was getting madder by the minute watching too much TV."

The need for an outlet for his frustrations gave rise to Geoffrey Gillett, the author.

"I just let it pour out," he recalled. "My first effort was an atrocity. It was garbage. It was terrible."

Work then began on a second manuscript which was submimtted to the Canadian Speakers' and Writers' Association in Toronto for a professional critique.

A group of authors was assigned to review the work and "they told me where I was going wrong with the style, the framework and the content."

Out of that process came The Afghan Tree, along with three other manuscripts.

An adventure story, its theme centres upon the relationship between two major characters, one of British, the other of Afghan citizenship. The setting is in Afghanistan, with some action unfolding in Kashmir and Pakistan.

The novel shows the Brifon saving the Afghan's life and an ensuing friendship that emerges is frowned upon by peers as it manifests itself at a time in which Britain was tying to subdue Afghanistan.

While working on his manuscripts, the former marketing executive was busy forming relationships with book publishers and editors in an attempt to gain some insight into the book publishing industry.

When The Afghan Tree was completed, it was sent to seven Canadian publishers.

"Three said that they would love to publish it, but couldn't," he said. The other four shared the opinion that while they were not to be quoted, "it's not Canadiana." He was advised to send it to the United States.

Canadiana, Gillett said, was defined as "anything written about Canada."

To escape this constraint, "you have to be a big name—a Pierre Berton, Gordon Sinclair or a protege of theirs."

The second argument offered to him was one of marketing. He was told that most Canadian authors have had to go to the U.S. to have their first works published. Canadian publishers were willing to put a manuscript into print once the author had shown there was a market for his work.

During his analysis of the market, Gillett said he found that only 10 per cent of Canadians read books and novels. And of those, some 25 per cent are under 25 years of age and "not all that receptive to novels."

This leaves publishers with a potential market of 1.6 million readers throughout the country.

DONALD DUCK HERO OF STUDY

HAMBURG, West Germany (Reuter) — Donald Duck is going up in the world. After 40 years of being at odds with society, the web-footed squawker finally moves into the drawing room—or at any rate the study.

A group of German admirers of the Disney cartoon character are meeting in a suburb of this city to inaugurate a Donald Duck fan club.

It has been provisionally titled The German Organization of Non-Commercial Supporters of Pure Donaldism.

In the words of its founding father, 27-year-old Hans Von Storch, a bearded mathematician and meteorologist, the society will be dedicated to rescuing the internationally known duck family from the fringes of society.

Van Storch already circulates a news letter on donaldism for which he claims a readership of 300.

The cartoonist was responsible for drawing the Donald Duck cartoons between 1948 and 1963, which the Hamburg Donaldists regard as the classic period.

They differentiate it from what they call the commercialized donaldism of the present day (Latin: donalidismus modernis vulgaris) and late-realism (donaldismus macabris diabolus).

The fans are pledged to combat the "primitive vulgar donaldism" of dealers who speculate in rare copies of comics which they claim change hands for up to 50 times their original price.

They are also going into the genealogy of Donald's family and the sociological structure of Duck Town, which, for some unexplained reason, has a pig as mayor.

The subjects for study include the cultural and family structure of Duck Town, sex and the family structure (Who is the mother of Donald's nephews?) and The Donaldist outlook on the world.

TOKYO

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

TOKYO — You've heard all the scare stories.

- File for bankruptcy when applying for a Japanese visa.
- Fire-breathing dragons burn up dollars like high octane petrol.
- Scotch is dearer than gold.

Well, to allay everyone's fears I've come up with a confidential (and somewhat optimistic) report on the Tokyo scene.

What it means is that you can do the town for a song, and I don't mean Sayonara.

There is, however, a minus side: The traveller still pays dearly at the larger hotels. A perfectly good example is the Imperial where the check for a bowl of soup and a plate of stew at lunchtime came to $16. (I'm still wondering what the auditor will think about the $7 I paid for breakfast: Cornflakes, orange juice and coffee. Period. Nothing more. Not even a refill on the coffee.)

Such frightening figures sent me off in search of a reasonable lunch. I found it less than two blocks from the Imperial at a restaurant with a choice of beef stew or mixed grill for only $3. (You can hardly do that well at home.)

As the lady from the Japanese National Tourist Organization pointed out, the fail-safe method for inexpensive dining is to study the priced meal displays in the windows.

In Tokyo the bargain hunter follows the same simple formula that applies in major cities the world over — avoid the grand hotels and the charming restaurants with the soft lights, the linen and the crystal.

Tip: Rather than checking in at one of Tokyo's showy hotels, try the Kayu-Kaikan, a sleeper that's managed by the very same group that operates the Deluxe Okura. At the Kayu-Kaikan rates for a single start at $17 a night and doubles are available for $24.

Besides being nearly new, the Kayu-Kaikan has spirit. Upon registering, guests are given a Yukata, which is one of those slick robes worn in the little Japanese inns.

The idea is to slip out of the Western gear and into a Yukata and put in a call for the masseuse, getting all the kinks worked out after tramping through temples, museums and the alleys of the Ginza.

Located in a quiet residential district near the Imperial Palace, the Kayu-Kaikan operates both Western and Japanese-style restaurants as well as a coffee bar snack in the lobby itself.

Around the corner another little-known Tokyo hotel, the San Bancho, runs up the welcome flag for as little as $12 a night single and about $22 double.

At the San Bancho, tipplers sip sake in a charming five-stool bar and take their meals in a pleasant restaurant just off the lobby. Later they soothe the nerves by eyeballing the hotel's small but exquisite garden. Meanwhile, others amuse themselves counting legions of joggers sprinting by on a footpath circling the palace grounds.

The San Bancho compares favorably with the Tokyo Inn, which is a convenient five minutes by cab from downtown Tokyo and within walking distance of the Tokyo Tower.

Granted, the rooms at the Tokyo Inn are small, the rates come to a reasonable $19 a night single and $26 double. And besides, where else can you snooze with a Shinto Shrine just outside the door?

For the traveller seeking a bit of Japanese pizzazz together with Western touches, the Hotel Tokyo offers the guest the choice of crashing on the floor or slipping into an ordinary bed. Either way, singles start at about $16 a day and doubles at $30.

In addition, there are Japanese-Western style rooms combining the best of both at $27 to $41 a day, including slippers and robe.

At the Gajoen Kanko (the very same hotel in which Sorge, the Russian spy, came in from the cold), it's a mixture of atmosphere and age.

Ceilings spanning its hallways are covered with murals and the elevator — a museum relic — glitters with inlaid mother-of-pearl.

While the rooms are a bit tacky they're offered at only $12 to $21 a night single and $29 to $37 double. (Those with a western exposure provide glimpses of Fuji on Tokyo's rare, smogless days.)

Views of Fuji are framed as well from the sparkling new Hotel Ibis in Tokyo's chic and swinging Roppongi area. Here the price for a single starts at under $20 a night and doubles are bid around $30. One word of caution: Anyone who suffers from claustrophobia will find the space similar to a roomette aboard the old Orient Express. I mean, well . . . they're small.

Then there is the Fukudaya, a small, intimate inn (a favorite or ours) that rises in the shadow of Tokyo's towering Hotel New Otani. Although surrounded by the city, the Fukudaya gives promise of country living in a park-like setting, with rooms facing private gardens. Hot tea is delivered to the door in the morning and quiet reigns throughout the grounds.

Ah, tranquility!

The price for living like an emperor runs $35 a night single and $55 double, which doesn't include the meals. Although expensive, it's the perfect choice for those in a mood to splurge a bit.

Western meals are served in the morning, but at night it's strictly a Japanese affair — suyiyaki, tempura, sushi, unagi —roasted eels. Whatever the purse can afford.

After this if the body begs for a hamburger the guest has only to cross the street to the New Otani. They are prepared with onions, pickles, mustard. The works.

Same as home, Sam, same as home.

Buzzards saluted in Hinckley

HINCKLEY, Ohio — Unlike Capistrano's swallows, Hinckley's birds have yet to be immortalized in song. But that doesn't keep the visitors away on Buzzard Sunday.

Hinckley is a township of about 4,500 people, lying in the rolling Appalachian hills of northern Ohio about 30 miles south of Cleveland.

The township seat, a gas station, a general store and a school on a crossroads, might be any other American town, except for its favorite birds, the lowly buzzard.

It is probably the only community in North America that holds the buzzard, actually the turkey vulture, in high esteem. And the buzzards seem to return the sentiment, because for more years than anyone can remember, one flock of buzzards has returned to Hinckley from its winter migration promptly on March 15.

It's never too late to call a Travel Agent.

The hotel you made the reservations in looked great in the picture. How could you know it was taken before you were born?

A Travel Agent would have known. It's his or her business to know things you can't. Like the best values in hotels, transportation and sightseeing.

With an Agent you'll never pay more than the going rate. And since they usually know about special bargains, you'll often pay a lot less.

And it's free. All this service you get usually costs you nothing. Because for the most part a Travel Agent relies on commissions from hotels, airlines, etc. for income.

So if you want to find travel bargains—like the kind Western Airlines offers—Travel Agents know how. They ought to. They're bargains themselves.

Kiev: 'Earth's greenest city'

KIEV, U.S.S.R. — Tiny black figures clustered in groups on the searingly white ice of the Dnieper River below the bridge, ever hopeful that their lines, let down through drilled-out holes, would produce a fish or two.

A small crowd gathered around a pile of wooden boxes on a sidewalk across the river. Inside was a great prize on a freezing winter day; grapes. "I want the good ones in the next box down," insisted an elderly man in a black overcoat. He broke into a smile of triumph when the woman in charge gave in.

Shoppers along Kreshchyatik Street downtown tried to avoid slipping on thin sheets of ice left by a thaw that froze over during the night ... lines formed outside food shops as potato, egg, and poultry shortages continued despite the country's overall good harvest last year.

Local newspapers carried items about determined efforts to make the Ukrainian countryside more appealing to young people attracted by the bright lights of Kiev, Kharkov, Odessa, Lvov. Plans include new housing loans, scholarship funds for study of farm subjects at city institutes, and putting younger people in the governing councils of state farms.

And above the bustle, the golden domes of the famed St. Sophia's Cathedral and the ancient Pechersk Monastery on the river's edge gleamed like scenes from a fairy tale amid the snowy expanses that have seen century after century of history flow by like the Dnieper itself.

These were scenes from Kiev this winter, the "mother of Russian cities," which is at least 1,400 years old. It was once one of the major centres of the world. It was larger than London, in fact, before the Mongols fell on it in A.D. 1240 and reduced it to centuries of stagnation and neglect.

Standing on Vladmir's Hill, where each bare twig and branch is encased in its own made-to-measure slipcover of ice, one looks out over the Dnieper. There is a huge statue of Vladimir himself, who chose Christianity as his creed and brought Kiev to the peak of its influence at the end of the 10th century.

Today Kiev is a very different place — known to most people in the West mainly for the chicken dish that bears its name in restaurants, or as the capital of the Ukraine, from which tens of thousands of people emigrated to New Jersey and other American states.

A tip for visitors, however: Ask for Chicken Kiev in the Hotel Moskva and you will get a veal dish. To get the real thing, you must ask for cutlets, Moscow style. No one seems to know why.

There are six huge hydro-electric power stations on the Dnieper River as it flows from Smolensk in the north through the Ukraine to Odessa and the Black Sea. Instead of the trade caravans that once linked the Muslim Orient to Western Europe and Scandinavia come the clatter and the smoke of trains, trucks, boats and factories.

The Darnitsa area across the river, long left idle, now bristles with block after block proper. Already red and yellow trams rattle along many streets and over the Dnieper bridges, but newer ones would go faster and stop less often.

A new bridge for automobiles has just opened across the river. To test it for stress, more than 100 trucks filled with sand drove onto it before opening day and lined up while engineers measured the effect. A new north-south subway line has opened to add to the existing east-west line.

In the summertime, the poplars along Shevchenko Boulevard (named after one of the most famous figures in Ukrainian literature) prompt Kievites to say that theirs is the "greenest city on earth." The city is ablaze with flowers.

One of the most popular new attractions is an open-air folk museum to preserve Ukrainian culture. Seven villages have been brought into the city, piece by piece, and re-created in a 700-acre park. They include clothing, icons, curtains and furniture.

Yet the energy and the industry of Kiev hide some lingering problems as well. One of them is food.

Meat is still in short supply following the grain shortages of 1975, when the Soviet Union suffered its worst grain harvest since the Second World War. Whereas Moscow has only one meatless day in restaurants each week, Kiev has two (Tuesdays and Thursdays), when only fish is served.

The length of lines outside food stores during evening rush hour is noticeable to any passerby. Potatoes and cabbages were hard-hit by early frosts last October. In the Ukraine, university students, who traditionally leave classes to help with harvests, went out twice last autumn instead of once.

And out in the countryside, officials are concerned with signs of a drop in population in the villages that for years have been a mainstay of population growth.

Japanese favor pristine Truk

MOEN, Truk — The Truk archipelago or, for that matter, the 2,000-odd islands of Micronesia in the western Pacific evoke few reminiscences among the travelling public.

The entire area was made a trust territory under United States administration after the Second World War, in which Truk was the scene of heavy fighting against the Japanese.

Ironically, it has been Japanese honeymooners, who have spearheaded the tourist invasion of the largely unspoiled territory, which includes the U.S. naval base of Guam and Saipan, another wartime battle ground.

Moen, the main island and district centre of Truk, has a few roads made of coral which shortens the life of automobile tires. It is surrounded by jungle and the Truk Trading Centre, in the main village, has to be seen to be believed.

The oldest general store in Micronesia, it is housed in a high-domed quonset hut with shelves some 10 feet high running the length of the building. They are piled with everything from paints to children's needs such as the tagged "chamber pot."

Moen has a pleasant, modern, cabin-style hotel, operated by Continental Airways whose subsidiary, Air Micronesia, has landing rights on the islands. There are two other hotels, one spartan and the other a Somerset Maugham type with a nightclub.

There is more accommodation on Saipan, including the new, 185-room Saipan Continental, the Saipan Beach Inter-Continental Inn and several smaller, more moderately priced hotels.

Despite uncrowded sandy beaches, the Micronesian islands are unlikely to become a popular vacation destination for North Americans in themselves because of prohibitive air fares and the time required to get there. But visitors to Hong Kong, Manila or Japan may enjoy a short side trip to one or two of the unspoiled islands.

A lure to divers is the world's second-largest coral reef, 40 miles wide, which surrounds Truk and several of its satellite islands.

In February, 1944, American aircraft sank 60 Japanese ships, including 15 naval vessels, and downed 250 aircraft in this huge natural harbor. Tourists can hire a boat to take them over the area where a number of ships are visible in the clear water, although most are too deep down for amateur scuba divers.

April in England: chapped knees, goose pimples

"Oh, to be in England
"Now that April's there."

Actually, England's still thawing out in April. Weather this noon: Chilly 48 degrees with gloomy clouds. But the English are not intimidated by thermometers. They go by the calendar. By the poetry of Robert Browning.

Bicycles and shorts. Chapped knees and goose pimples.

"Lovely day, what?" "Oh, right! Simply grand!"

At Henley-on-Thames, rowing skiffs skim the water. Frozen youths at the oars. Thin cotton shorts and singlets. A T-shirt without the half sleeves. That's what England's like in April.

At this time of the blooming year, the department of the environment issues its book of dreams: Historic buildings you can buy. Stone castles with lonely dungeons. Haunted manor houses. Redundant churches and tilting gravestones. A 15th century jail which can be modernized. Maybe not Alcatraz, but you could make it cozy.

I asked an Englishman about this — (Member of Parliament, no less) — who said:

"You see, England has a glut of historical buildings. The Romans built on top of the Celts. Saxons and Danish Vikings built in Britain. The Normans built on top of them.

"Even Conrad Hilton built his hotel so that the top floor looked down into the breakfast room at Buckingham Palace.

"Now most of these historic buildings require work. They were built before garbage disposals. Before flush toilets. Towns were protected by moats. Anything lying around, it was 'Chuck it in the ditch, Mother.' "

One that captures me is Hinton Priory, Hinton Charterhouse. Near Bath, Avon.

Travel Tips

By Stan Delaplane

Built in 1232 by the Countess of Salisbury. Capped gables. Mullion windows. Arch fireplaces. Oak staircases. "Grade 1," says the listing. Practically ready to move in: $198,000.

The Countess was the widow of William Longespee. I looked it up in Salisbury. William was the bastard son of Henry II and a local cupcake name of Fair Rosamund. Became Earl of Salisbury.

Now if you owned that scatter, you'd never run out of dinner conversation.

"I am flying with my two children — one year and two-and-a-half — to join my husband in Germany. Any suggestions what I should take on the plane?"

Better take everything: Milk in bottles — the stewardess will warm them. Disposable diapers. Canned baby food. I've hauled four kids around the world — from two months old to 15. I became an expert.

Airlines try to have these things aboard. But ground crews forgot something. Take everything. And you won't be in a jam 35,000 feet up. Planes I rode had cribs that clipped into the bulkhead. You could request those seats when you buy your ticket. Repeat request at airport.

". . . flying to England with our sons eight and ten . . ."

Most lines carry games for kids. At that age, a card game called Fish keeps them busy for hours.

At eight, my younger son developed an embarrassing problem of upchucking. Not on the plane, mind you. He waited until we were in the long line going through customs.

He gave a one-minute warning though. He turned slightly green. I solved this by having him wear cheap cowboy hats. When the green tinge appeared, I shoved the hat under his chin. Rushed him to the nearest bathroom. Never quite made it. But you can throw the hat away.

Small problem in England: The coziest lunches on English roads are served in pubs. No kids allowed in pubs. Look for restaurants or hotels with sign Fully Licensed. Dining room serves food and drinks.

Tourists flood Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It may not be as fancy as Beverly Hills or as opulent as Palm Springs, but country music is doing for Nashville what movies and money have done for the California towns: It's dotting the country-side with pleasure domes.

Buses carry tourists past 15 of the most impressive homes of the music-makers and there are many others off the beaten path.

Webb Pierce's stone manot house stands on 10 landscaped acres with tennis courts, formal gardens and a $50,000 guitar-shaped swimming pool.

The Grand Ole Opry, founded in 1925, was the magnet that drew persons like Pierce to Nashville.

Pierce, who lives in a quiet residential area south of town, near Minnie Pearl's place and the Tennesee governor's mansion was selling sightseers his albums at poolside. Neighbors got a court order banning such activities. He said he would quit selling records, but he wouldn't stop seeing people.

Tammy Wynette also settled in this area. Her $1.2-million mansion has 11 bedrooms, 15 baths, and a wine cellar.

Many of the long-established country artists such as Hank Snow live in smaller suburban neighborhoods.

Kitty Wells, the Opry's first woman member, lives in this neighborhood. Her primary concessions to luxury are red velvet upholstery in the living room and an indoor swimming pool.

Some stars such as Del Reeves and Loretta Lynn have settled in the rolling pasture-lands of middle Tennessee.

British deluxe vacation

Dive for Spanish gold

Where in the world do you look for Spanish gold? The limpid Caribbean? The jungles of Central America? Chances are you'd never look in dour Scotland.

But 30 million pieces of eight, said to be worth $22 million, lie in a Spanish galleon that rests beneath the waters of Tobermory Bay in the Isle of Mull.

Searchers have hunted for the ill-fated Armada wreck since 1588, but with uncanny cunning the warship withdrew, embedding itself slowly in the mud and silt of the bay. For some years after it sank the tip of a mast was the only part of the ship that was visible. When it disappeared, the shop's location was lost, and it was not until September, 1975, that divers found the galleon.

This summer the bed of Tobermory Bay may be disturbed again. The Duke of Argyll, chief of the clan Campbell and master of Inverary Castle, who owns the wreck site, has advertised the treasure as one attraction of a deluxe two-week vacation in England and Scotland.

THE VACATION, which costs a whopping $25,000 for two, includes a Concorde flight to and from London, sightseeing in the British capital, transportation to the little town of Tobermory, numerous trips, and the opportunity to hunt for treasure in the bay with scuba gear and guide.

The Duke has devised the package in an attempt to raise money to restore his castle, which was severely damaged by fire two years ago.

The challenge, of course, is open to adventurous souls regardless of clan. While the silt prevents access to the wreck's interior, pickings are good in the surrounding area. For, when the ship exploded and sank, many valuables were blown free.

"There were some of great accompt (account) within," states an old record, "who were always, as they say, served in sylver."

A PEWTER candlestick was found by John Gratton who led the 1975 dive on the ship and who will escort the guest divers this summer.

The Duque di Florencia, as the galleon is called, broke away when the Armada was routed in the English Channel and sailed into the North Sea. Rounding northern Scotland, it eventually dropped anchor in Tobermory Bay in the Isle of Mull. The island looked inhabited and seemed to offer food and water for the return trip to Spain.

The Spanish captain's first encouter was with one as ruthless as himself: Sir Lachlan Mor Maclean, lord of the isle. A gory bargain was struck. Maclean, who was not interested in the war between England and Spain, agreed to supply the ship for the homeward journey if the Spaniard would lend him 100 men to slaughter his enemies on neighboring islands.

THE SHIP was revictualled; the Scottish chieftan got his mercenaries and laid waste the islands, but by December, 1588, the two men were quarreling. MacLean may have heard there was gold on board and demanded further payment. He held a Spanish officer hostage. In return one of his own men was imprisoned aboard the Duque di Florencia.

There was a stalemate for several weeks, then the Spaniard, deciding to cut his losses, set sail. The Maclean kinsman, Donald Glas, realizing he would never see his homeland again, decided to blow the ship up. Somehow he found his way to the magazine, pierced a hole in its wall, struck flint to steel and ignited the powder inside.

The Florencia promptly exploded and sank to the bottom of Tobermory Bay. In 1641, the shattered wreck "with its ornaments, munitions, goods and gear" was given to the Duke's ancestor, the Marquis of Argyll, by express command of King Charles I.

Diving bells had just been invented and they were taken to the bay but no treasure was found. The gold was thought to be in the stern "under ye sill of ye gun room." But this spot was covered in a mountain of wreckage, impossible to move.

THE MACLEANS watched this activity with burning resentment. They maintained that the wreck was theirs. After all, hadn't a brave kinsman given his life to destroy the ship?

But the Duke of Argyll ignored them. He had the charter and began leasing treasure-hunting permits to adventurers who flocked in from all over Europe. The Macleans harassed those attempting to recover the treasure, ignoring an injunction brought against them.

BUT NATURE was the greater disruptive. Streams which ran into the bay caused a massive build-up of silt. It soon was no longer a matter of finding the treasure, but of finding the wreck. Attempts to locate it were made during the 1950s and 1960s by the 11th Duke, the incumbent's father, but nothing was found.

Then in September, 1975, divers, using steel probes struck something solid. The Duke, diving 60 feet to join them, grasped a probe and felt its point meet solid wood. Dimensions tallied with those of the vessel. Carbon-14 tests showed that slivers of wood pried from the deck had been cut, in either the 15th and 16th century, from African oak, the steel of the day. The ship had not, apparently, disintegrated.

The Duke's ancestors had searched for the wreck for 334 years. Ian Campbell, the 12th Duke, hopes it will attract a bevy of wealthy tourists and co-operate by yielding up at least a little gold.

Duke of Argyll, Ian Campbell

Mexico menu 'bugged'

MEXICO CITY — Would you like some ant soup with a tasty main course of fried grasshoppers to follow?

That is the kind of menu recommended by a team of Mexican biologists who are urging their compatriots to imitate their Aztec forebears by eating more insects.

"Insects are the most numerous and aggressive members of the animal kingdom, but they are still not exploited rationally as a food source," said Dr. Julieta Elorduy, who has just completed a three-year investigation.

She said ants, grasshoppers, waterflies and caterpillars found in every village could take the place of milk, meat and eggs, luxury products beyond the reach of a large minority of Mexico's 64 million people.

The doctor set out on her search for a cheap new food source early in 1974 in an attempt to alleviate the chronic malnutrition which persists in many rural districts and city slums.

U.K. MOTORCYCLE INDUSTRY SAVED

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's once great motorcycle industry, now reduced to a single factory controlled by its workers, has been saved.

The Meriden Workers' Co-operative has received $850,000 from the government and a $1.7-million investment by General Electric Co., enabling it to continue operations.

Meriden had run out of money by the beginning of this year and was piling up unsold Triumph Bonneville motorcycles which it had hoped would be a big seller in the United States.

It was not the first time the plant had faced bankruptcy. In 1975, the factory went broke under private ownership and was given an $8.5-million government grant to continue under workers' control.

The 700 workers at Meriden attribute disappointing sales of the Bonnevilles to the fact they have had to market their machines through Norton-Villiers, Triumph, who once owned the plant. The latest funds will allow them to buy the distribution network.

Meriden was one of three worker-controlled enterprises whose founding was inspired by former industry minister Tony Benn, an advocate of workers' power.

The second of these enterprises, Kirby Manufacturing, based near Liverpool, is showing a small profit after initial losses. The third, a newspaper set up from the ruins of the privately owned Scottish Daily Express, lasted six months.

When the Meriden co-operative was started, most British motorcycle riders had turned to Japanese machines. But recently the company announced the sale of 30 motorcycles to Japan, comparing the feat with selling snowballs to Eskimos.

Chief Coroner Cheers System

TORONTO — (CP) — Ontario's chief coroner, Dr. H. B. Cotnam, says the existing coroner's jury system is the best in North America but "the system was rotten 13 years ago."

He said in an interview the duty of his office, which carries the motto, "We speak for the dead to protect the living," is to ascertain the truth about how somebody died in order to see whether it can protect other people.

The former Pembroke, Ont., physician became chief coroner in 1962.

Under the previous system, the 45-minute inquests of the day involved "going through the motions." The recommendations meant nothing and if a recommendation was given, nothing happened to it, he said.

Today, it is an effective preventive system in which juries can say whatever they want.

"They can't attach blame any more but the way the evidence comes out, it's quite apparent who is at fault."

Cotnam supervises the Coroners Act of 1972, the Anatomy Act and the Human Tissue Gift Act.

He accounts for everything from the manner in which human organs are donated to investigations into the cause of all reportable deaths in Ontario. He also directs the province's 380 coroners.

Last year there were 26,000 cases reported to coroners involving sudden deaths in which questions remained to be answered as to their cause.

They covered everything from road accidents to deaths in hospital operating rooms and in provincial institutions such as mental hospitals.

"It's a reportable death, no matter what, when it is questioned," Cotnam said.

Local coroners must check all reportable deaths and, depending on their findings, they may order an inquest. If in doubt, they ask Cotnam's office for advice.

After studying autopsy results, the local coroner must decide on the case. In most instances the issue is straightforward, the circumstances self-evident and no inquest is warranted.

Then a report must go to the chief coroner's office where, depending on the circumstances, a further probe may be ordered. Closer scrutiny and possibly an inquest are needed when something has gone awry during a surgical procedure.

The minute a coroner finds himself in possible conflict of interest in a death probe, he must withdraw from the case and seek an outside opinion.

One of the newest features of the system is that a regional coroner may be brought in for this kind of case.

In the past, non-medical coroners, including lawyers, were appointed but Cotnam said doctors are the only logical people to function as coroners because they know what it's all about.

He wants incompetent doctors fired and said they usually can be spotted by a history of bad medical practice, even if no one has died through their carelessness.

Cocaine Arguments a Repeat Of Marijuana Debate: Expert

MONTREAL (CP) — A nationally prominent psychiatrist who has dealt for years with drug-related problems says current arguments over the effects of cocaine may become "the great marijuana debate revisited."

Dr. John Unwin, who has been called to testify as an expert witness at narcotics trials, said a widespread increase in the use of cocaine has resulted in authorities reassessing ideas about the drug.

"If coke is such a dangerous drug, where the hell are the casualties?" he said. "We're not seeing them medically."

Unwin, a member of a Canadian Medical Association committee studying cocaine use, confirms reports of malnutrition among habitual users of cocaine, as well as hallucinations, convulsions, heart failure, respiratory problems, violence and formication—a sensation that insects are crawling over the skin.

But he said doctors are puzzled over the lack of serious adverse reactions among occasional users of cocaine.

The doctor said he has had only one cocaine user as a patient but that his problems were not caused or worsened by taking cocaine.

"When it gets down to hard facts based on first-hand knowledge of significant numbers of casual, recreational users, we seem to be more and more in the situation that we were in during the 1960s in regard to marijuana and hashish," Unwin said.

Drug enforcement authorities tend to associate cocaine with the sinister elements of society, he said, while users insist it is a harmless drug and doctors warn that prolonged use can lead to violence and paranoid psychosis.

"There is a pronounced tendency, primarily among non-professional writers but also among professional experts, to report and stress findings which support their own particular bias—which is, more often than not, based on their own value system and lifestyles.

"Even when all the myths are put aside, it comes down to values. . . . Up until the mid-1960s it was taken as valid that drugs of any nature equalled addiction . . . equalled depravity."

Cocaine, the alkaloid of the cocoa leaf chewed by South American Indians for centuries to increase strength and ward off fatigue and hunger, was first isolated about 1860 in Europe.

It was consumed in a variety of products including wine and chewing gum.

The use of cocaine in soft drinks was banned in the United States under the 1906 Pure Food and Drug Law.

Passage of the Harrison Narcotic Act, the first U.S. federal anti-drug law, banned the use of cocaine, opiates and heroin. In Canada cocaine was outlawed under the 1929 Narcotics Control Act.

"The current concepts are that cocaine is not a narcotic and like marijuana has no business being in the Narcotics Control Act," Unwin said.

He added that cocaine is a central nervous system stimulant and is not addictive. Nor does it develop tolerance in the user or cause painful withdrawal symptoms.

However, drug researchers seem to agree that prolonged cocaine use can create psychological dependence.

Unwin said virtually everyone he has talked to about the drug has mentioned the depression that accompanies even mild use. Euphoria and feelings of added strength might turn into insomnia and paranoia with prolonged use.

Hip Defects Helped By Chrome Plating

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The University of California says it has found that chrome-plating a defective hip joint works better than inserting an artificial joint made of steel.

University doctors said 51 patients had been tested with the new chrome-cobalt plating of the hip and none of the fractures, infections or loosening that sometimes accompany an artificial hip joint had been reported.

"Most patients returned to their occupation within three months," said Harlan Amstutz, professor of orthopedic surgery at the university. "One patient is playing racket ball and eventually some may be able to play tennis or ski."

He said the total hip replacement with a stainless steel joint had worked well for many patients but in recent years an increasing amount of loosening and fracture had been reported.

In the new process diseased bone is scraped away from the hip joint and a chrome-cobalt cup is fitted over it. The socket is lined with polyethylene plastic and both cup and liner are cemented to the bone with acrylic.

Molecules Attracting Investors

NEW YORK — Molecular biology, the branch of science that lately has developed "gene splicing" and a rapid new test of potentially cancer-causing substances, is unfamiliar territory for analysts, and investment counsellors in banks, insurance companies and mutual funds.

But representatives of investors find their attention drawn to such possible future uses of gene-splicing as introducing the ability to make nitrogen fertilizer into food plants that lack this property, or to the use of the new chemical test to show the true dimensions of cancer risk in an industrial society.

Last week, nearly 200 people from the investment industry heard Dr. Matthew Meselson of Harvard University, a noted molecular biologist, say that this field of research has been brought into a new phase by the new techniques.

So far, the practical results of rapid advances in molecular biology have been "meager," Meselson said at a seminar on "new ideas" at the Plaza Hotel sponsored by the Wall Street research firm of Mitchell, Hutchins Inc.

Even the techniques for taking genes, or chemical units of heredity, out of one species and splicing them into the genes of another might turn out to have a largely cultural and scientific impact, Meselson said.

It is difficult, he said, to know if it would be commercially important to substitute synthetic human insulin, made in bacteria with transferred genes, for the supplies of insulin from hogs and cattle used widely in treating diabetes.

Some plants, such as soybeans and peanuts, possess the natural ability to use colonies of bacteria on their roots to make their own nitrogen fertilizer by "fixing" it from the air, that is, by combining the chemically inert nitrogen with atoms of hydrogen. Using gene-splicing to transfer such an ability into a major food grain to ease fertilizer shortages "is certainly feasible," Meselson said, "but I don't know if it is desirable."

The new chemical test, developed in the University of California laboratory of Dr. Bruce Ames at Berkeley, seems more likely to have an early practical impact, Meselson said.

The test uses bacteria to identify substances that can cause mutations, or alteration of the genes. It is believed that these mutagenic substances would also cause cancer in many instances.

The so-called Ames test, Meselson said, "allows us to identify mutagenic substances in ourselves with great sensitivity." The causing of mutations, he said, "correlates very well with carcinogenicity," the causing of cancer.

Other talks at the Mitchell, Hutchins seminar concerned world food supplies, the delivery of health care in the United States, the use of government spending to reduce unemployment and possible future patterns of energy use.

C. Peter Timmer of Cornell University, an economist who is to transfer shortly to the Harvard University School of Public Health, said that developing technologies for growing more food might provide enough to feed more than 40 billion people, or up to seven times the population anticipated in the year 2000.

The problem is not technology, Timmer said, but distribution. Although the world presently grows enough food to give each of the world's 4 billion people 3,000 calories of energy daily, he said, about a billion people are judged to suffer from calorie shortages.

Carl Hocevar of the Union of Concerned Scientists in Cambridge, Mass., said that a new study by that organization indicated that a stabilized United States population in the year 2050 might use only about 50 per cent more energy than today's level, either from a large number of breeder nuclear power plants or from a large number of solar devices and windmills. Perhaps half the energy would be in the form of electricity, he estimated.

In his talk on molecular biology, Meselson said that in the 24 years since Francis Crick and James D. Watson worked out a structure for the gene-containing chemical called deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA, there has been "a gusher of understanding of basic life processes." Scientists have come to understand, he said, the information encoded in the DNA is translated into construction of thousands of proteins, the specialized substances that carry out most of the work of living cells.

Still unclear, Meselson said, is the way cells of a living creature differentiate, or specialize, during development from a fertilized egg into an adult, or about how such cells prevent mutations and the onset of cancer.

Mayor Fights For Nature

ASPEN, Colo. (Reuter) — Stacy Standley, mayor of this Rocky Mountain ski resort, is known for more than just posing nude for a calendar and admitting he occasionally smokes marijuana.

Standley, 31, has been a leading figure in a battle to preserve the alpine town's natural beauty.

The battle, fought for the last decade, has had country-wide repercussions.

It has pitted big developers buying up Aspen's valley floor and mountainsides against local residents anxious to preserve the valley's natural beauty.

Aspen's success in limiting building has prompted other U.S. towns to try the same thing.

Standley, mayor since 1973, said: "We feel it's a very special place and worth fighting for."

Standley and the city hall staff of this former silver-mining town of 5,800 are fighting the reputation it has recently acquired as a sin city.

A community of wealthy residents, celebrities and skiers, Aspen's social events are marked by occasional hell-raising on the part of the skiing community such as barebreasted ski racing at its annual carnival.

"The image of the town nationally is that it's a sort of hell-raising, lost-weekend kind of community and people here really resent that kind of image," said city planner William Kane.

Kane said the battle over Aspen's development began in 1967 when skiing became widely popular.

"A growth boom took place just as environmental consciousness came to the fore," he said. "We were dealing with an annual growth rate of from 10 to 15 per cent. Our residents decided they were going to get this problem under control."

In 1972 public anxiety over unrestrained building had repercussions in the election of county commissioners who control the land around the city.

Two of the three commissioners elected were opposed to uncontrolled growth. They immediately brought in regulations to cut development by half and stop the breaking up of rural land for homesites.

They gained a major ally six months later when Standley was elected mayor.

Standley recently told a visiting reporter he smoked marijuana but later amended this to say: "I only do it about once a month in private homes with friends."

He caused a stir locally in 1975 by being photographed for a local calendar in a frontally nude pose standing in front of a pickup truck.

The bachelor mayor is active in an organization known as COPE (Community Organizations for Planned Environment).

"We were being bludgeoned by these developer-types," he said. "They were experts and we were country bumpkins."

Developers filed more than $35 million in suits against the city and county over their reduced building rights. Most of them have been settled and local authorities have lost none of those that went to trial.

City authorities have also introduced measures to discourage the use of cars.

China Back on Scientific Track

By JAY MATHEWS
Washington Post

HONG KONG — A decade-long battle in China over the need for advanced laboratory research has apparently ended in victory for those who feared the nation was slipping back into its 19th century state of sceientific illiteracy.

The sudden turnabout in Chinese science policy may have a considerable impact on the rest of the world, for it puts the scientifically and mathematically adept Chinese back into the business of training potential Nobel Prize-winners. As the effect trickles down to Chinese classrooms, it may also cripple an effort to bring higher education to peasants and workers.

A series of articles in the official Chinese press, written after the purge in October of four Politburo members who criticized elitism in education, indicate that scientific research is again in favor and that university students are again going to be judged and tested vigorously on their academic skills.

In the last 10 years university officials have been told to give preference to children of workers and peasants instead of secondary school pupils with high test scores. Programs for advanced medical and scientific degrees have been cut back in favor of training paramedics, called "barefoot doctors," and factory technicians.

Just how far back the pendulum will swing is uncertain. The official press still praises "barefoot doctors" and scientists who go to work in factories. But at the end of January the New China News Agency also spoke favorably of instructions from new Chairman Hua Kuo-feng and other leaders "on paying more attention to natural sciences and to theoretical study and on brining the role of specialized scientific research institutes into full play . . ."

The official media are now thoroughly roasting the hero of a recent student revolt against hard academic work, which China's professors obviously saw as a dangerous threat to the future of Chinese science and learning.

The youthful hero, Chang Tieh-sheng of Lianoning Province, became famous for an allegedly "blank" examination paper he gave his secondary school instructor in 1973. He called the exam a surprise attack on a student of humble peasant background like himself, a way to keep the proletariant from winning coveted places in universities.

The Chinese are now told that Chang's exam was not blank at all. He handed it in and only began to complain when he received a 38 per cent in language, 61 per cent in math and only 6 per cent in physics and chemistry. He is said to have made abject pleas for "special consideration" that Mao Tsw-tung's wife, Chiang Ching, and her colleagues — the four people purged in October — turned into a heroic attack on the system.

Chang was not even a poor peasant, the media now say, but the son of a capitalist.

Without a Nobel Prize-winner of its own to carry the torch for pure science, China's scientific community has invoked the name of the Chinese-American Nobel laureate Yang Chenning. A People's Daily article says that the late Premier Chou En-lai after hearing Yang during a visit to China in 1972 emphasize the need for theoretical work, told leading Peking physicist Chou Pei-yuan to get to work on it.

Chang Chung-chiad, one of the Politburo members allied with Chiang Ching, attached the move to reassert pure science. He promoted the slogan, "Marxist philosophy is the basic theory for all sciences" and blocked Chou Peiyuan's efforts to promote natural science as a way of hitting at Chang's political rival, Premier Chou.

Chou Pei-yuan now says even Mao opposed the efforts of the disgraced Chang: "As Chairman Mao instructed us, Marxism includes but does not replace atomic theory and the theory of electrons in physics."

As a result of the efforts by Chiang Ching and her allies in the universities, the New China News Agency revealed recently, "The students of chemistry in Peking university . . . said that many units were afraid to offer courses in basic theory. The teaching staff for such courses was disbanded, and not one dared to carry out basic scientific reaearch. The 'Gang of Four' (Chiang Ching and her allies) said that the study of basic theory, and research were measures that would lead to the ivory tower and going down the old road."

With the "Gang of Four's" encouragement, the agency said, "Students of some schools in Peking in 1974 smashed windows and the desks in their classrooms."

New students are encouraged to study, and teachers encouraged to enforce discipline. Intellectuals, who ruled China for centuries but who have had their ups and downs under the Communists, are now making a comeback.

'IT'S A GOOD JOB'

TATAMAGOUCHE, N.S. (CP) — Anne Malick rejects the idea that she is a missionary or a crusader and suggests other legal-aid lawyers should take the same approach.

Eight months of teaching left her unfulfilled so she turned to law, specifically to the legal-aid office where she represents people who cannot afford a lawyer.

"I'm not in it because I'm helping the poor or giving aid to those who need it. It's simply a good job.

"If I was in private practice I would be doing deeds and other documents for the next 10 years with very little court experience."

Instead, she handles about seven cases a day in the role of public defender when she appears in magistrate's or county court and, in family court, an average of 11 divorces daily.

A pragmatic approach is essential in her new line of work, she said. A missionary approach merely leads to frustration.

The record of acquittals for legal-aid lawyers is not long, she said. Often clients plead guilty and then seek legal help.

Sometimes she advises them to change the plea to not guilty after explaining that guilt is often not a black-and-white matter, in street fights, for example.

"Just because one got the better of the other does not mean he should be charged with assault causing bodily harm. They should both be charged with disturbing the peace."

She said being a woman lawyer has created some uneasiness and she has had irritating experiences such as being mistaken for a secretary. These annoyances came from both sexes and all ages.

Cardinal Defends Put-Down

EDMONTON (CP) — Six senior Indian affairs department officials were back in their offices on the 27th floor of the CN Tower today but remained substantially relieved of their old duties.

The six, who are paid between $27,000 and $36,000 a year by Ottawa as top-level administrators in Alberta Indian affairs, said they were put in the basement Tuesday.

But Harold Cardinal, regional director-general of Indian Affairs for Alberta, who put them there, said they are now back in their office in the CN Tower, several blocks from the basement, "at the suggestion of headquarters in Ottawa."

"It is difficult to understand criticism of the space since it has been used by the department to house training programs for Indian women, for senior Indian officers at the diredtor level and others," said Cardinal, 32, a Cree and former president of the Indian Association of Alberta.

Cardinal instructed the six, all white, to produce research reports on various aspects of Indian reserve development in about three to four months and relieved them of their normal administrative duties.

"The ofice assignment was never intended as a punitive step and all of the officers have been restored to their former offices," Cardinal said.

In Ottawa, Arthur Kroeger, deputy minister of Indian affairs, said Cardinal has made some moves without understanding implications since he took office on April 1.

He said Cardinal moved too quickly and attributed this to inexperience in the federal public service, but that things appear to have straightened out now.

The officials involved are director of operations Robert Dodson, assistant regional directors Jim Pratt, Eldon Schorn and Duncan Clark, executive assistant Ruth Fisch and Lorne Mowers, acting head of evaluation research and liaison.

Cardinal said the object of the assignments is to reduce the level of unemployment among Indian people to a par with other Albertans. He said unemployment levels among Indian people were 60 per cent and 100 per cent on some reserves.

OTTAWA'S EXCESSES TOP ISSUE

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Maxwell Henderson, former auditor-general of Canada, said Friday that government spend ing and its consequences of unemployment and inflation are a much greater problem for Canada thatn Quebec separation.

In a speech to the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Chamber of Commerce, he said that if Canadians do not solve these basic problems Quebec will go down the drain with the rest of the country.

Government spending fuels inflation, creating the disastrous by-product of unemployment as the nation moves daily from crisis to crisis, he said.

Henderson blamed lack of leadership in recent years as the reason why federal spending reached $41.1 billion to the end of last month. Spending 10 years ago was only $9.8 billion, he said.

"Thrift and prudence in the handling of public money is necessary and vital if our young country is to survive and return to sane and sensible government, to give us leadership it so badly needs to achieve its great destiny."

Spending is not confined to Ottawa, he said.

"Canada must surely be one of the most grossly overgoverned countries of the world with its huge bureaucracies at the federal level duplicated at so many other levels in the provinces.

Youths Told: Bon Voyage, But . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department is warning young Canadians travelling abroad this summer not to be foolish and run afoul of foreign drug laws.

Advertisements are being inserted in youth-oriented publications warning against a variety of things thaat can turn a trip into trouble, including a long term in a jail.

The warning is emphasized in a booklet inserted in every new passport, called Bob Voyage, But . . .

Consular officials list drug-caused problems as the greatest they face as they seek to provide services for them more than 1.5 million Canadians who will travel to countries other than the United States this year.

They cite figures that show that of 538 Canadians put in foreign jails in 1975 in countries other than the U.S., 321 were in on drug offences.

Of 373 in jail in 10 months of last year, 208 of them were there for drugs.

Bob Voyage, But . . . says increasing severe drug penalties are being imposed around the world. In Singapore, for instance, conviction of possession of small amounts of drugs can result in the death sentence.

"Canadian should exercise extreme caution about accepting to transport any parcel, however, small, across a border, remembering that narcotic drug traffickers will try to use respectable, innocent-looking tourists to carry drugs for them through custom inspecting lines," the booklet says.

Drugs are only one problem that will face travellers. Statistics show that last year consular officers arranged for government loans to get 740 perons home from abroad, and helped 1,706 others get financial help from friends and relatives.

The officials helped when 382 Canadians died abroad, sending bodies hme in 120 instances. They provided a vast variety of assistance to 355,840 other persons.

Along with drugs, these don'ts are in the youth-oriented ads: Work in a foreign country without permission; run out of money; deal in illegal currency or the black market; fail to have a ticket home; lose identification; fail to obtain a visa; voilate local laws or "offend customs and sensibilities."

Consular officials here add that youths should not be as naive as some have shown themselves to be in the past.

They cite cases of persons wandering through Europe with all their money and indentification in one bag or packsack. When that is lost or stolen they are in trouble.

Sask. Beer Price Up

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Liquor Board announced today that prices of all brands of domestic beer and about 400 brands of spirits will increase as of Monday.

A case of one dozen beer will increase by 35 cents in liquor stores and 55 cents in hotels.

The announcement said Saskatchewan brewers got Anti-Inflation Board approval for an increase of 19 cents a dozen. Liquor board mark-up and sales tax account for the other 16 cents. In hotel sales, the additional 20 cents has been allowed the hotel operator to cover increasing costs.

The new price for 12 beers will be $4.30 at liquor stores and $5.30 in hotels. Low alcohol beer will sell for 60 cents less.

Gov't Paying For NDP Suit

The provincial government is paying $3,000 to the British Columbia Professional Employees Association to settle a breach-of-contract suit brought against former NDP health minister Dennis Cocke.

The suit arose from a situation in which government-employed doctors switched their representation to the B.C. Medical Association from the professional employees bargaining unit of the public service.

Ultrasuede coats make good travellers . . .

If we were travel-bound, first thing we'd be considering is one of the wrap-around style ultrasuede coats we saw at Charmante's last Monday! . . . Such a coat would go anywhere with panache and aplomb . . . whether we wore it to top a dress, pantsuit or evening gown! . . . Colors are delicious , brilliant jade green, indigo blue, tea rose, French blue, and silver grey . . . But on second thought, we might opt for a very special ensemble also new at Charmante's . . . a Jerry Silverman indigo blue ultrasuede coat . . . worn over a cream polyester dress with shirring at the waist and at the V-neckline . . . A wide blue ultrasuede sash-type belt with this, although it also has a self belt . . . Same color of dress with jewel neckline . . . separate cowl collar and blue and white ultrasuede belt looks equally elegant . . . We might mention that coat and dresses are sold separately so you can have your pick . . . or team a dress with one of the wrap-around coats . . . whichever you decide, the resulting ensemble is as elegant as anything you're likely to see! . . . Since we mentioned travel . . . though, goodness knows, you don't need to travel to enjoy one of these coats or ensembles . . . Charmante's have a great selection of travel bags . . . from roomy totes to purses of every description . . . Great store to shop in when you're looking for something different! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Blouses with that springtime zip . . .

It's a long time since we saw Liberty blouses with such pretty patterns as those which have just arrived at Wilson's . . . They're all small and dainty floral designs . . . the traditional designs for which Liberty is famous . . . in simply delightful colors . . . Tana lawn (pure cotton) in shirt style with long sleeves and square bottom so they can be worn either out or in . . . Sizes 10-20. Priced at $38 . . . We saw some very nice imported polyester blouses by Damon Sport . . . Shirt style with fullness gathered into a small yoke back and front, and a separate tie . . . These are a nice light weight of polyester, in white, cream, yellow, navy and pink . . . sizes from 8 to 16, and also tagged at $38 . . . Wilson's have a lot more of their popular Pierre Balmain blouses, in a little heavier weight of polyester . . . These too are in the well-liked shirt style, with separate ties . . . They're comfortably full . . . nothing skinny about them, and the colors are good . . . lemon, red, blue, white and navy . . . We understand more colors are expected very soon . . . $35 for these . . . Wilson's are very pleased with their new blouse maker, Dalie . . . And we certainly concur with them! . . . Dalie blouses are mostly striped . . . in different ways, including a zigzag stripe . . . Some have mandarin collars, others regular shirt collars . . . but the striped patterns are so original and fresh-looking that they'll add a lot of pizzaz to your spring skirts or pants . . . $30 to $35 at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Good reproductions better then poor antiques . . .

If you haven't done any browsing in Standard Furniture's Fine Furniture Gallery lately . . . do go in now and look at the beautiful Italian furniture which has just arrived . . . It's solid walnut (and you know how scarce solid wood of any kind is nowadays!) . . . Everything finished by hand by craftsmen who take pride in their work . . . made to look like furniture from the past . . . This means a lovely soft patina . . . For instance the chair arms have the feel and color of years of stroking hands . . . Legs of chairs and tables are all done by hand so that each one is slightly different . . . Peter Gazeley pointed out to us some lovely pieces this week . . . A refectory table with hidden extension big enough to seat 8-12 people when open . . . Another dining table with a trestle base . . . Solid walnut chairs with traditional woven grass seats . . . Venetian, but more reminiscent of English Edwardian chairs . . . And if you find the grass too casual, Standard will dress up the chairs with little down-filled slip seats . . . You know, there are no good buys in antiques today . . . and it's a lot better to buy a good reproduction than a poor antique! . . . More of this Italian reproduction furniture includes bookcases, sideboards . . . a dainty little desk . . . little corner whatnots . . . An armoire which could be used for anything from a wardrobe to a liquor cabinet . . And would you believe it's actually cheaper to buy this beautiful hand-finished furniture than mass-produced stuff? . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

The trip through the Panama Canal is simply fabulous . . . Something everyone should experience at least once in their lifetime! . . . From San Juan you return to Los Angeles on a charter flight . . . and while we're not going to quote fares here, because they're subject to variables . . . we'll tell you that included in the cost is the chartered air fare back to L.A. . . . as well as regular air tickets from Victoria to Los Angeles and return . . . If you want to spend a bit of time in California before coming home, there's nothing to stop you! . . . So do go and have a talk with Paulin's about this super travel event! Lawyer Likes 'Patching Human Mistakes'

elizabeth forbes

Sheryl Dunn, a young lawyer, established her own office here shortly after she was called to the bar in September, 1976.

She describes herself as being in general practice, but she is looking ahead to "some day" changing that to what is known in her profession as "a restricted practice," which would see her specializing in corporate and commercial areas.

"In those fields I could plan my time to better advantage," she says, "and after all, it's time, as well as expertise, that a lawyer sells."

Sheryl is a feminist, interested in equal opportunities for women. However, she is astute enough to realize that "changing public attitudes to make this dream come true, will not happen over-night."

She is also one of the young moderns who believe in using their maiden names.

"I've never used my husband's name," she tells you with quiet dignity. Then she gives you "a combination of reasons" for maintaining her status as Sheryl Dunn.

First, husband John Johnston, a business consultant, has always been in favor of a woman keeping the name to which she was born.

"He believes that if she changes her name, she loses her identity," Sheryl says.

Second reason, she has lived "quite awhile" with her maiden name and she has become very used to it.

Finally, she reminds you that it is a lot easier to get credit under a woman's maiden name.

"No matter how well established you may be," she explains, "if you marry and take your husband's name, immediately your credit rating is merged with his and you lose your single status rating."

John and Sheryl were married when she was in her second year at University of Toronto Law School, and they set out to make their home in Victoria, as soon as she graduated.

They chose this city because its size makes it "a workable place to live," and also because "we both love the sea and the cruising and sailing that is so popular in these inland waters."

Immediately after they arrived, Sheryl articled, for a year, in the office of barrister and solicitor, Cecil Branson.

In that year, it was the responsibility of the articling firm to see she received as much experience as possible by assisting on cases or occasionally seeing her own clients, all under supervision of a senior lawyer.

During that time she also studied more practical areas of the law, in a tutorial course.

She wrote two sets of examinations and, with good pass marks and over 11 months of articling behind her, received two weeks vacation before being called to the bar.

Then, rather than enter an established law firm, Sheryl decided to "take a chance," and open her own office.

So far, she has not regretted that move.

Her eyes sparkle as she tells you she finds her work intellectually interesting.

"Laws are continually changing," she points out, "and I must keep up with those changes."

Every new file (or case) is different. In every file (or case) there must be substantial research.

"Whether barrister or solicitor, in court work or non-court work, we are continually patching up human mistakes or helping someone out of trouble in their personal affairs.

"We must plan, draw up contracts, decide on a course of action, and then proceed."

Many people believe lawyers spend most of their time in court, but that is not necessarily so, Sheryl Dunn says.

In general practice, for instance, "only about six per cent of the time, is spent in court."

She goes along with the thinking of many young lawyers who believe that "somehow" the law must be demystified and made more meaningful to many more people.

Then "hopefully", new laws more in tune with present day attitudes, will appear.

As well as being a busy woman lawyer and joining her husband John in a love for sailing and the sea, Sheryl is a talented pianist.

She had her own piano in Toronto but, as yet, has not found one to replace it here. So, as she tells it, pianos in the homes of her friends are getting "good work-outs" right now.

Sheryl Dunn

"I relax when I play the piano," she explains, "and my friends have been very understanding."

Nevertheless, she is determined to have her own piano as soon as she can, "even though our present apartment is so small I don't know where it would fit in."

Quite seriously she then tells you "when I find the instrument I like, I may set it up in my office."

If that happens, not only will her clients receive good advice and help, they may also have their nerves soothed with a Brahms Lullaby or a Chopin waltz.

"Every day is a challenge," she tells you.

Then she concludes with "it takes determination and single-mindedness to become a lawyer, but once the long training period is over, its exceedingly worthwhile!"

Gastown Fry Oysters

½ pt. shucked oysters (halve, if very large)
6 eggs
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2-3 cup fine dry breadcrumbs
8 bacon slices
2 tbsp. water
salt and pepper to (taste)
¼ cup chopped green onion
1 medium tomato, cut in wedges

Drain oysters; dry thoroughly with paper towels. In small bowl, beat one egg well. Place flour and breadcrumbs in separate small bowls. Roll each oyster in flour to coat thoroughly. Dip each into egg; roll in breadcrumbs to coat evenly; set aside.

In skillet, over medium heat, cook bacon until crisp; remove from skillet; drain thoroughly; crumble. Set aside. Place prepared oysters in bacon drippings in skillet. Cook until oysters are golden, turning once (approx. 5 minutes).

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, with fork, beat remaining five eggs and water. Season with salt and pepper. When oysters are golden, reduce heat to low. Pour egg mixture over oysters; sprinkle top of oysters and egg with crumbled bacon and chopped green onion.

Cook until mixture is set around edges (do not turn oysters). With metal spatula gently lift edges as they set, tilting skillet slightly to allow uncooked egg mixture to run underneath.

Continue cooking until all egg mixture is set. To serve, cut in wedges; place on heated serving platter; garnish with tomato wedges. Makes 4 servings.

Why Did Dinah the Mynah Bird Clam Up?

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Dinah, my ten-year-old mynah bird, acts fine in every way except that she's suddenly clammed up and has cold feet. Should this be a worrying time? — M.R.

DEAR M.R.: Any unaccountable change in behavior pattern where a pet's concerned can be a cause for worry. Frequently, though, on reflection, one can find a psychological cause for a pet's change in moods or behavior. Dinah mynah might be expected to clam up, for example, if there were some type of upsetting (to her) change in her household environment. Conversely, cold feet may be a sign of more than reluctance, could actually mean a disturbance in circulation of considerable significance. If after this length of worrying time your mynah's still mute and her feet frosty, Dinah's doctor — she should have one — should specifically answer your question.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've just finished fighting ear mites on our third cat. That's three out of our four cats who had ear mites when we got them. Are they really this common, or are we just really unlucky? — J.O.

DEAR J.O.: While three out of four cats don't have ear mites, at least two out of three cats who have ear troubles do have mite problems.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a parakeet that walks on the floor and goes after toes. How can I stop him from doing it — besides wearing shoes? Wearing shoes is out of the question, it's too dangerous. Several times he has been kicked because I didn't know he was on the floor. If I'd had shoes on, it would have been all over. — D.R.

DEAR D.R.: Even if you're barefooted, he is likely to be all over — all over the floor, that is, should you step on him. And sooner or later, at this rate, you probably will. Either you're going to have to figure some way to keep your feet off the floor or, a simpler solution, confine your toe-pickin' parakeet so he can't get down there. Be firm about it. Put your foot down. But only after he's up.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the two months we've had Beanie, she's been a constant headache. It's her sandbox. She won't ue it. Instead, she goes all over the house wherever there's newspaper lying around. Usually it's on the davenport. It's reached the point now where we're afraid not to leave newsppaper down somewhere, for fear she'll go somewhere anyway. Someone suggested she didn't like the kind of litter we were using, so we've tried four different kinds. We also switched the entire box. Beanie's too good a cat in every other respect to think of getting rid of, but we're getting desperate. We're willing to try anything. — O.D.

DEAR O.D.: Why not try paper? Since Beanie prefers to use it, encourage her. Line her box with newspaper, then half fill it with the shredded variety. Odds are excellent it will work.

Apparently she was trained, or trained herself, to paper to begin with. When-if she uses the paper-loaded box, that's the time to keep- the rest of the paper picked up.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Clancy, my dog, and I have a lot in common. but I didn't realize how much until I found our she had diabetes. The only other member of our household in Gwendolyn Gren, my parakeet, and I was wondering about her. But parakeets don't get diabetes, do they?—N.W.

DEAR N.W.: While parakeets aren't as prone to it as some other diseases, they nevertheless do develop diabetes. It occurs routinely in many bird examinations.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Pooch still has a hangover from the holidays — everyplace. Being a very persuasive type, he mooched goodies from everyone at every party we had. Now he's stuck with the results. Solid flab. I'm going to diet myself, soon. I want to start Pooch on one now. The trouble is, I've never known a diet to do much good. What if we put Pooch on water and vitamin pills? He's just turned 13 and I know that extra fat has got to come off fast. — L.O.

DEAR L.O.: A canine crash diet can cause trouble, especially in a teenager. A zero caloric intake along with a negative protein balance could quickly cause dangerous, profound metabolic changes which could stress the older dog beyond its ability to compensate. Any major diet change in your older animal should be okayed by your veterinarian first, and particularly so in a case like this one. While I'd be the first to agree that flab is bad and a stringent diet is undoubtedly indicated, a daily no-calorie count could quickly become a doggie dietary disaster.

COUNCIL AIMS TO HALT ENDLESS CHILD SHUFFLE

CALGARY (CP) — Too many children with emotional and behavioral problems have been shuffled through social agencies "like cattle being led to the slaughter," says Gerry Fewster, chairman of the newly-created Calgary Children Service Council.

He said in an interview the referral system was "a colossal flop" because agencies weren't putting children in the right place at the right time.

About two months ago, more than 30 Calgary agencies became fed up with the referral system and banded together to form the children service council, hoping to improve the procedure.

"Every system children are exposed to is devised by adults to conform to adult needs," said Fewster. "Many children don't stand a chance."

The new council is intended to cut through red tape and tailor programs to suit individual needs. A special referral board will complete a detailed case study of each child and try to plug him in to the right therapeutic outlet.

Fewster said the old referral system was based on social expediency. The solution for a so-called problem child was simply to remove him from the mainstreaam of society.

"We have to reverse this trend. It's a cliche, but we're trying to protect children from the protective system."

The organization will force agencies to be accountable for the children. In the past, many children were swallowed up by the labryinth of social agencies in the city, he said.

"We're setting up a tracking system to see who is accountable at each point and making them responsible for the child. This business of accountability is long overdue."

Fewster said there is a drastic need for a long-range plan to work with juveniles but the provincial government refuses to map out a blueprint for the future because children don't win votes.

Americans Flip Lids Over Italian Lamps

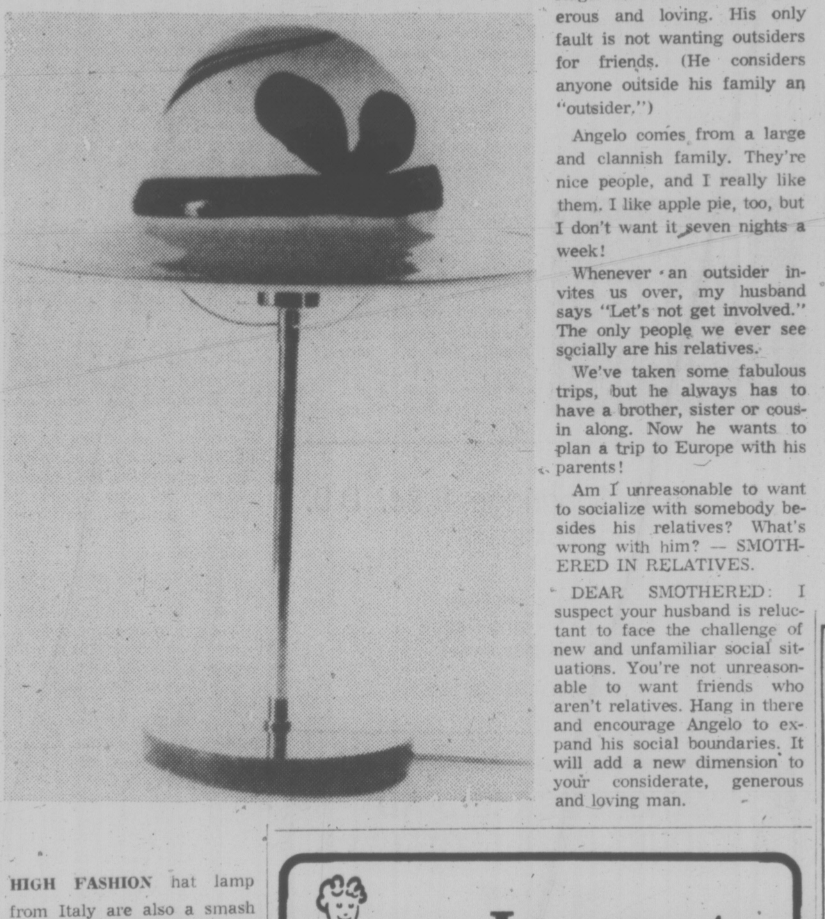
NEW YORK (NYT) — Hats are back. Brims are wide, worn down with one side flipped up. All sport bands; some boast flat bows. Crowns? Most are round and firm but one — on a fedora — is creased with great swagger.

But instead of a face, these red, pink, and white chapeaus shade a bulb. And they're not of straw, or of felt — they're all blown glass. The bases, you guessed, are hat stands.

"It's all done with a wink — in fun," insisted Marina Gatti to an interviewer in Milan the other day. Miss Gatti was surrounded by the Art Deco light-up hats in the basement workshop (it looks like a sheik's tent) where she works with Kobi Wisendanger, her Swiss husband, who is the chief designer.

Both are wild about Art Deco — "the wittier the better," Miss Gatti reported. They also collect Pop Art. Hence the lamps.

These glass-shaded hat lamps, made somewhere in the hills of Tuscany by a Venetian glass blower, are a smash hit in Milan. They got the same reaction here when Donn Golden of Lighting Asociates here unpacked the first shipment a few weeks ago. Golden reporters that the architects and decorators who frequent his showroom (everyone is welcome to look, but only professional designers may buy) have been snatching them up at $300 each.



HIGH FASHION hat lamp from Italy are also a smash hit in New York City where they sell for $300.

All in the Family

DEAR ABBY: Angelo and I have an unusually good marriage. He's considerate, generous and loving. His only fault is not wanting outsiders for friends. (He considers anyone outside his family an "outsider.")

Angelo comes from a large and clannish family. They're nice people, and I really like them. I like apple pie, too, but I don't want it seven nights a week!

Whenever an outsider invites us over, my husband says "Let's not get involved." The only people we ever see socially are his relatives.

We've taken some fabulous trips, but he always has to have a brother, sister or cousin along. Now he wants to plan a trip to Europe with his parents!

Am I unreasonable to want to socialize with somebody besides his relatives? What's wrong with him? — SMOTHERED IN RELATIVES.

DEAR SMOTHERED: I suspect your husband is reluctant to face the challenge of new and unfamiliar social situations. You're not unreasonable to want friends who aren't relatives. Hang in there and encourage Angelo to expand his social boundaries. It will add a new dimension to your considerate, generous and loving man.

DEAR ABBY: We live in one of the best neighborhoods in town. There is not one house on our block worth less than $75,000. Some new neighbors moved in next door, and I understand they bought the house for the asking price and paid CASH.

They seem very nice, but they are weird. The first thing we noticed was that they didn't have a television antenna, so my little boy asked their little boy about it, and he was told they didn't have a television set!

They have only one automobile (and a two-car garage!) and the father drives the car to work every day. The children and mother all use the bus. They rarely go anywhere, except to church. The wife doesn't have any fancy clothes or jewelry or furs. The children aren't permitted to have any toys dealing with war or violence. Could they belong to some offbeat religious cult½ What do you make of them?— CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Maybe they've just got cash, conservative standards, high moral principles and pacifistic ideals.

They sound like ideal neighbors to me.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.S. IN SIOUX CITY: If your man keeps you cool in the summer and warm in the winter, stocks a plentiful cupboard, comes home sober right after work without having folded, spindled or mutilated his paycheck, you've got a prince. Take good care of him.

Cleft Palate Correctable

At what age should a child have an operation for cleft palate? My grandchild was born a week ago. you can imagine how upset we all are. — Mrs. R.W., Ind.

Dear Mrs. W.;

I can appreciate your anxiety about this birth malformation. Yet I would like to assure you immediately that modern surgery is remarkably advanced in the repair of both cleft palate and the harelip, if one is present.

Plastic surgeons, using operating microscopes, now obtain spectacular results, leaving little or no evidence of the original deformity.

The choice of the exact operation and the ideal time depends, of course, on the judgment of the surgeon. With the safety of modern anesthesia and the operation itself, children are being operated on at very early stages in their lives, even during infancy.

The results are so gratifying that you and your family should draw comfort from the confidence in the eventual outcome of your grandchild's problem.

Since we moved to a large city I've had the feeling that my wife and children are just not as well as they used to be when we lived in the country. I'm giving real thought to going back to live on a farm even though my economic opportunities are better in the city. Does this sound reasonable to you? — Mr. J.L.V., Calif.

Dear Mr. V.:

Federal and state medical agencies are paying a great deal of attention to this idea. In fact, a National Conference on Rural Health is being held soon, in an effort to study the advantages of rural health over city health.

Dr. Julian Lentz, of North Carolina says, "The rural environment has always been assumed to be a healthy one because of hard work, exercise and clean air. But the health of the rural population is not all that good. For example, the rate of infant deaths is as high in poor rural populations as it was for the general population twenty-five years ago. And more than 16 per cent of the people living in rural areas have chronic diseases that limit their activity. This is higher than that which occurs in large cities."

It is hoped that medical societies, farm groups, universities and government agencies will come to some conclusion about rural health after the conference. I don't think it is wise for you and your family to be uprooted because of speculation, rather than fact.

NO WATER —HAVE A BEER

In recent weeks, a growing number have served drinking water only on request.

"It used to be a person who was a little bit thirsty used to take another sip of water," said Timothy Burke, a restaurant owner. "Now he starts thinking in terms of another beer."

All over San Diego, a survey shows that wine and beer drinking is up as water consumption goes down as a result of drought.

Free For The Asking

It is always useful to examine the underlying reason why one does or does not do something.

The 16-page booklet "Teenage Self-Test About Cigarette Smoking" helps young people to become aware of what makes them want to begin smoking or why they prefer to abstain.

The booklet features different sets of questions. The answers to the first set reveal the level of acceptance of the health hazards of smoking. Replies to another set shows how sensitive teenagers are to the rights of non-smokers to breathe unpolluted air.

Other sets of questions deal with other topics such as manufactured reasons for smoking, reasons for starting and teenagers' feeling towards authority.

Over 7,0000 teenagers across the United States were asked about their attitude towards smoking. The booklet is the result of their answers. These would probably be the same if given by young people in Canada.

The self-test booklet is available from your local Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, your Christmas Seal Organization. You'll find the address in your telephone directory.

Please allow at least two-three weeks for delivery.

Vegetable Shapes Given to Toys

By MAY E. MacLEAN

A few weeks ago, I read of a small company which had been formed by six members of the same family to make a new toy, but not the usual stuffed animal variety, but for the child who doesn't care for vegetables- No doubt you have, or know of a child who is going through this stage.

They decided to make six vegetable shapes, peas in the pod, butternut squash, carrots, corn on the cob, broccoli and tomato. As you will see, the idea is to make the soft, cuddley, friendly-faced vegetable-like animals to give the vegetable hater, a happy feeling towards these nutritious foods.

It was suggested that if the mother or teacher presents this toy along with the real vegetable it represents, the child is more likely to develop a positive attitude towards his food.

Made from brushed nylon and filled with non-allergic polyester, they are machine washable and fire retardant. They retail for about $10-$12. However, it would not be too difficult for you to make your own. Using either the brushed nylon or felt, one can easily make a pattern from brown paper, and stuff the shapes with foam chips.

Which reminds me to thank all the readers who sent in a solution for handling foam chips. It's a very simple trick, either wet the hands, with water, or fabric softener, or spray with an anti-static which is sold for machine dryers. This enables you to handle the chips without them clinging to your hands and avoids a mess when the chips fly all over the place.

Getting back to the vegetable toys, it might be an idea to make these in miniature to decorate ones kitchen! Hang them in a bunch on that spare wall! It's a good idea for a bazaar item too. Not so long ago, I can remember having a red tomato-like shape as a pin-cushion!

I hope you are all taking advantage of the sales which are going on right now, and stocking up on knitting wool and crochet threat. There are some marvellous bargains to be had, and the kits for crewel and needlework pictures and cushion covers are on sale too.

At the time of writing this column, we have been experiencing some extremely cold weather in Montreal, but I am sure this cannot last too long. I've found that a poncho worn over a sweater when one is sitting, provides just that extra little bit of comfort and warmth, and Spring is not too far away!

Soon it will be poncho weather and this easy-to-knit poncho is knitted with an extra heavy quick-knit or craft yarn on No. two knitting needles, that it will work up fast! If you wish, you can make it with the fair-isle border or perfectly plain. The depth of the fringe can be altered to your own individual taste, and the draw string at the neckline, insures a snug tight fit.

To order, this weeks pattern No. 7205 send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra quarter to cover the cost of handling and mailing and print your name and address. Send to:— May E. MacLean "KNIT & CHAT" c-o Box B, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. All my patterns are now 75 cents including back numbers and those in the catalogue. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

When the word "garlic" is mentioned, almost always someone will say something disparaging about its odor. But the garlic is strong medicine and has many uses, for people and plants. It is a cousin to the onion. Organic gardeners insist that the plant and its extracts can be used to control a wide range of insects.

There are two types available: Regular garlic bulbs, which contain a number of small cloves, and elephant garlic, which has the flavor of regular garlic but none of its strong pungency. You can slice elephant cloves right into a salad.

Plant garlic cloves 1½ inches deep, 2 inches apart, base down, in an area of full sun. To harvest, dig the roots up when the tops fall over. Planting cloves in small pots is an excellent way to introduce the plant experience to our younger brothers and sisters.

Some Strange and Exciting Bulb Happenings . . .

GARDENING

jack beastall

Strange and exciting happenings are being reported by local home gardeners, mainly concerning spring flowering bulbs.

Daffodils, as any gardener knows, are golden yellow, and have long trumpets backed by six petals. But in some gardens, bulbs purchased as daffodils have produced flowers with trumpets only half the usual length, or with the trumpets reduced to a length of about one-half inch. Why this abnormal growth?

Another puzzling thing is the color of the flowers. Some stay a pure white and never turn to gold, others show a distinct pink tinge on a white background when first opened, and some have funny short centrepieces absolutely red in color.

As if these happenings were not enough, the daffodils coming out now have several flowers on one stem with short orange-colored trumpets, nothing like a daffodil should be.

Some gardeners are quite perplexed when they discover these unlikely flowers, while others are excited over the prospects of making a small fortune.

As the seasoned daffodil grower has already guessed, these reports are from gardeners not familiar with this family of plants.

They have purchased their first packet of assorted unnamed bulbs, and are now discovering that a daffodil is more than a golden flower with a long trumpet in the centre.

It would be more correct to say these gardeners are becoming acquainted with the genus Narcissus, because the common name "daffodil" is applied only to the kind producing the long trumpets even when these are not gold in color.

Within the genus Narcissus are varieties with all the colors and shapes that have been reported, as well as those bearing more than one flower on the stem.

Nothing has gone amiss, nor is there a chance of having found something new, for any complete bulb catalog, or book, will give the name of each variety that has appeared in local gardens.

The strange happening of a month ago was miniature daffodils, some only three inches high, which burst into flower at what appeared to be a month early. A lot of gardeners thought these must be diseased because they did not grow taller.

These miniatures are known as species daffodils, the wild forms from which today's giants have been developed.

Those who are enjoying the wonders of Narcissi for the first time may find the genus more interesting if the accepted names of the various parts of the flower are mentioned.

It is disconcerting to locate a book on a subject you wish to pursue and be confronted with terms which the author fails to explain in simple language. A knowledge of the flower part names is also needed if you are putting entries in a flower show.

First, those parts which most gardeners call petals, that radiate from the top of the flower stem and form the background for the centrepiece.

There are six pieces to this part of the flower, three of which form a triangle in front, and three others forming another triangle behind the first one. The three at the back are called sepals, and the three in front are true petals

Each piece is termed a segment, and the six segments form the perianth, a word formed by combining two Greek words, peri meaning around, and anthos, a flower. Sometimes the perianth remains stiffly upright, but in some species the segments are totally reflexed, bending backwards like the petals of the cyclamen.

Whether a new variety is worth developing for sale, often depends on the substance of the perianth and the placement of petals and sepals in regard to one another.

The same qualities of substance and placement of the perianth segments are looked for by judges before giving awards at a flower show.

The centre part of the flower also has different names which indicate its length in comparison with the length of the perianth segments, and also determines to which division of narcissus it belongs. This centre part is called a corona.

A trumpet is as long, or longer, than a perianth segment, the flower being termed a trumpet daffodil.

Large-cupped narcissi have a cup or corona more than one-third but less than equal to the length of the perianth segments.

Small-cupped narcissi have a cup, more often referred to as a crown, not more than one-third (usually less) the length of a perianth segment.

In addition to those mentioned there are the doubles in which the reproductive organs and cup have changed to petaloids, the Triandrus group, Cyclamineus with reflex perianth segments, the Jonquilla (Jonquils), Tazetta, Poeticus, and the species and wild forms.

The seed capsult is located right behind the perianth at the tip of the flower stem. When the flower first opens it is covered with a thin membrane which dries as the flower develops and finally disappears.

Seed is only useful to the hybridist after making controlled crosses to develop a new form. The seed formed from open pollination in the garden is useless.

Because it takes so much strength from the bulb to produce seed, the gardener removes just the seed capsule and the remains of the flower as soon as fading commences, leaving the green flower stem to act as an extra leaf for manufacturing food.

Leaves of these bulbous plants should never be cut off because only sufficient are formed on each plant to make the required amount of food.

After the seed capsules have been removed, the soil is well moistened and a teaspoonful of bulb or potato fertilizer is spread evenly around each plant. A bulb fertilizer is a 4-10-10 mix.

Twenty-four hours later, sufficient water is applied to the soil to wash the salts from the dissolved crystals down to where the feeding roots can pick up the solution.

From now until approximately the middle of June, regular watering is necessary to keep the foliage in good condition while next year's flowers are formed at the centre of the bulb.

When the leaves show natural wilting is taking place, watering ceases and the bulbs should remain dry to mature until the fall rains take over and new growth is started.

WORK FOR WEEK

Start old fuchsias outdoors by cutting back to basal growths. Repot if necessary; water well and keep in sheltered sunny place outdoors.

Feed acid-type fertilizer to rhododendron, azalea, kalmia, pieris, andromeda; a small amount, but only if needed for well-established plants having been in one place for several years.

Prune winter flowering heathers without more delay; shear part way down on green stems to prevent legginess.

Calendulas and African marigolds in short blocks through vegetable rows will be nice color contrast and just may have some value in repelling soil insects. Worth a try.

Pinch out tips of broad bean plants when first pods are set on lower stems. This reduces attraction to black aphids which feed on tender newly formed growths.

A Simple Test, But Effective

TORONTO (CP) — A simple, inexpensive technique used for about 40 years to obtain fingerprints is the basis of one of the most significant advances in criminal identification in the last five years.

John F. (Bud) Hinds, 39, in charge of forensic services for the Ontario Provincial Police, said he has taken fingerprints left by murderers on their victims' bodies up to 105 hours after they were killed.

Recently Hinds travelled to Detroit where he spent several hours taking 50 fingerprint samples from a young girl found murdered in an exclusive suburb.

He explained that the system was developed through tests carried out in 1970 and 1971 with the coroner's office in Toronto.

Provincial police, the RCMP and municipal forces in Toronto, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Rochester, N.Y., and Munro County, N.Y., now are using it.

The technique is so simple, the equipment so inexpensive, that any small police department can use it, Hinds said.

"There is a method that was tested in England using x-rays and it was very effective. But it's a laboratory test only—he wanted something that is completely portable.

One of the biggest advantages of Hinds' method is its portability—it can be used anywhere.

The equipment costs about $75 and it takes only a couple of minutes to record a fingerprint. But it can take up to several hours of close examination to find areas on the body that have been handled, Hinds said.

Iodine crystals and chemicals are mixed in a 14-inch plastic tube. Heat from the operator's hand causes the iodine to vaporize and by blowing into the tube, the vapor is spread over a small area of the victim's body. The vapor spray reacts with moisture in the fingerprints left on the body.

A pliable silver plate, .010 inches thick, is then pressed against the area to lift the fingerprint. The flexibility of the plates allows their use on curved areas of the victim's body— the throat, arms, chest or thighs—often touched during a homicide.

Prints can also be taken from wood, plastic foam, paper or leather.

But experiments on living persons show fingerprints must be taken within 1½ hours after the print is made. Secretions through the skin increase when a person is excited and wash the prints away.

Hinds said the powder method, used to take fingerprints from inanimate objects, cannot be used to lift prints from human tissue because the powder is absorbed by the skin's moisture.

Meet the Grain Family
When we brought out our MultiGrain bread, under the Pineridge Farms label, we knew it was going to be popular. But we had no idea just how popular. Fact is, Western Canadians liked MultiGrain so much, they asked us to formulate some different premium-grain, textured breads. So, we're proud to introduce two new members of The Grain Family—meet HoneyGrain and GoldenGrain.

MULTIGRAIN
GOLDENGRAIN

HoneyGrain is a dark, firm, textured bread. With just a hint of sweetness. That's because we used pure honey and dates for added sweetness. And nutrition. Then we slow-baked HoneyGrain to capture all that goodness, and to give it that extra firmness and texture everybody wants in a premium-grain bread. Try HoneyGrain for mansized, hearty sandwiches. Or just pop two conveniently square-shaped slices in your toaster, and see if you don't agree, there's nothing quite like the sweet, dark richness of HoneyGrain. (Honey: You'll love it, love it, love it.)

GoldenGrain, on the other hand, is our light-coloured, premium grain bread. It's light in appearance, but really heavy on nutrition. We left part of the Wheat kernel intact, so there's more fibre for roughage. We used only vegetable shortening in making GoldenGrain. And no preservatives. Try GoldenGrain for some really tasty toast. Or as a lovely platform for building your favourite sandwich.

We think you'll find that GoldenGrain's light, slightly crunchy texture adds a tasty touch to a variety of meats and sandwich spreads. (Goldie: Intellectually speaking, it's a gustatory experience.)

With all the excitement of the addition of the two newest members of the Grain Family, don't forget our all-time favourite, MultiGrain. It's a superb blend of the finest Canadian grains and flours. Kids just love the taste, and tell us so all the time. (Uncle Multi: Just what you've been looking for right? Right!)

The complete Grain Family is baked oven-fresh in our bakeries throughout Western Canada. Look for MultiGrain, HoneyGrain and GoldenGrain in your favourite food store.

And if you haven't already done it, introduce our All-Canadian family to your family.

THE 'KEY' TO THE PROBLEM

The first move in a chess problem is called a "key move" or briefly a "key." This move should, according to the theory of a good problem construction, be the least obvious move on the board. "The object of the key move should be carefully concealed, and should not be apparent until the mating move is made."

Problemist Ken Howard observes that "ordinarily (the key) should be an apparently aimless move; one which on the surface does not seem strong from a playing point of view." Hence, a good key move would be one which withdraws a piece from a strong position and moves it to a seemingly useless one.

A move which offers the opponent's King greater freedom of action before being mated is considered a good key move. On the other hand, a key move is considered weak when it is too obvious, gives check, captures an important piece, or restricts Black's forces. In a word, obviously strong aggressive moves do not make the most desirable key moves.

Problem Chess can be divided into two groups:

(1) Orthodox, in which chess problems rely on the rules of the game absolutely.

(2) Heterodox of Fairy Chess, in which problems rely on rules of the game only partially.

There are two groups or Orthodox problems: (a) mate problems and (b) studies. An orthodox problem is a composition in which White mates Black in a prescribed number of moves. A study is a composition in which White wins or draws as stipulated, and the number of moves is not prescribed.

Old Locomotive Restoration Set

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The task of restoring and refurbishing the original boiler of a 1925 locomotive used for logging on Vancouver Island has been undertaken by Millard and Lumb.

The custom steel fabricating firm began rebuilding the boiler early last summer and expects to complete the project soon. The 53-year-old company is one of a few left in Ontario that still work on old steam equipment.

When work is completed on the boiler, the unit will be shipped to the National Museum of Science and Technology in Ottawa where the drive trucks, chassis, tender and cab of the engine will be restored to original working condition.

Built by the Lima Locomotive Works of Lima, Ohio, for Merrill and Ring Lumber Co. of Vancouver, it was used on the Island until 1974 when Crown Zellerbach Co., which bought Merrill and Ring, turned it over to the National Museum.

Richard Lumb, sales manager for the steel fabricating firm, said because it is an old machine, many parts have to be custom made, which is delaying work on the boiler.

The boiler is being retubed, bolts are being replaced and a new smoke box has been constructed for the front end. The unit has been sand-blasted and will be tested by the boiler inspection branch of the ministry of labor to ensure its effective operation under pressure.

The stay bolts are being replaced and Millard and Lumb have had to go to the United States for the required nickel iron, which now is almost impossible to find.

"Because the boiler is a completely riveted design, there's no welding," Lumb said. "There was no such thing as welding when it was built, so to restore it to its original condition the unit has to be riveted together."

The boiler, 30 feet long, 16 feet high and six feet in diameter at the shell, weighs about 15 tons.

UVic Science Fair

Canada's top high school science students will exhibit their award-winning projects at the 16th annual Canada-wide science fair at the University of Victoria, May 15 to 22.

This is only the second time a B.C. centre has been host to the fair.

There will be about 130 exhibits on display all of which won awards at regional fairs throughout the country earlier in the year.

The exhibitors, who range from Grades 7 through 13 will compete for 27 gold, silver and bronze medals and 18 honorable mention certificates from the Youth Science Foundation.

The public will be invited to view the exhibits in the Elliott Building at UVic starting May 18.

Women's seminar

Catholic women have been invited to attend a one-day seminar at St. Peter's Church in Nanaimo April 23.

The seminar is being held in response to the needs of women for further education in current religious thinking, particularly to the role of women in the church expressed in the questionnaire circulated throughout the country last fall. Key speaker will be Sister Augusta Raabe, OSB, of Nanaimo, and there will be a panel discussion.

Perspectives and Prejudices

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

"We must concern ourselves with dichotomization of the backlash from the people we deal with, which, hopefully, is not necessarily identical to polarization of the feedback." That profound statement was made by an old friend of mine, a fellow pastor, at a meeting a little while ago which had been called to help us pastors work out new guidelines for evangelism — and that word "guidelines" shows that it was a very serious meeting.

I was surprised to hear my friend talk that way. He has always been a champion of simple, uncluttered English, and I feared that he had been converted to the fashionable new ways of speaking English.

At this meeting we had a visiting expert. He described himself simply as "a resource person," and I must say that he worked very hard at being resourceful with big words. Early in the proceedings he opened up and told us that he understood that we had come together in creative confrontation for meaningful dialogue, the purpose of which was to try to minimize dichotomies and functional disparities in the various evangelistic postures and paradigms now available to us, in order that we men at the grass-roots of the church could better plan our evangelistic thrusts and adequately avail ourselves of the splendid resources available to us. I must say, though, that this expert did not once use the word "paramater" — which surely is in his favor.

He urged us to opt for flexible stances, evangelismwise — but to be careful lest we inhibit viability. I may not be reporting him with complete accuracy—I had become mentally numb and confused at that stage—but I think that's the gist of what he said. Toward the end of the meeting he asked me if I agreed with a proposed plan of implementation. As genially as I could, I said, "no". Before I could explain my misgivings he moved on to my friend and asked him about the plan. My friend, with great wisdom, said, "Sorry, but I must give you, tentatively, a negative feedback." The others, including the expert, looked respectfully at him. I then realized that my simple, unambiguous "no" had marked me as an insensitive dolt, whereas the offer of a negative feedback, which meant exactly the same thing, indicated that my friend was wise and perceptive. I must remember that.

My friend was asked to go on. He offered an impressive little statement which wonderfully combined luxuriance of language with almost total lack of meaning. "Mere efficaciousness," he said without smiling, "is not necessarily effectiveness " A couple of us, who know him well, smiled at that, but most of the others including the visiting expert, seemed to receive it as solemnly as if it had come to them on a tablet of stone.

Later, over coffee, my friend and I discussed the meeting. We agreed that some hopeful things may have been said at it, but that the effectiveness of them — or perhaps it was the efficaciousness—had been obscured by the dreadful terminology.

Nazarene speaker coming

Nazarene missionary Hughlon-Friberg will speak in two Greater Victoria churches Sunday, April 17.

Friberg was one of three missionaries arrested and imprisoned for several months in Mozambique by the new leftist government.

No charges were laid and he was released through the efforts of the U.S. and the U.N.

Friberg, whose father is the pastor at the Nazarene Church in Abbotsford, will speak at 9:45 a.m. in Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene, 886 Craigflower, and at 11 a.m. in First Church of the Nazarene which is meeting temporarily in the Seventh-Day Adventist Church at 938 Pandora.

St. Michael's Choir School in concert at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto

A school humming with learning

St. Michael's Choir School of Toronto, which will give a concert at the Royal Theatre at 8 p.m. Monday, April 18, was founded in 1937 by the late Msgr. J. E. Ronan.

The purpose of the school is to train boys' and men's choirs for St. Michael's Cathedral and to produce future leaders in the music of the liturgy of the Roman Catholic Church.

Started with 18 boys, the school under its present director, Father Peter Somerville, has an enrolment of 315.

In addition to choir practice, all the boys study piano and about 35 study organ. Violin, classical guitar and the entire range of theoretical music round out the music program. All take a complete academic program for university entrance as well as religious studies.

The school is registered as a private school in Grades 11 to 13.

Six years ago a choir from the school toured Rome, London and Ireland, participating in the International Choral Festival in Cork, winning one competition and placing second in another.

Since then St. Michael's choirs have sung in nine provinces, more than 50 centres and have appeared on national TV.

A year ago they toured Switzerland and Germany competing in the International Choral Festival at Montreux with the rating of excellent.

Last December they joined the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. They recently made recordings of Joy to the World and This Is the Day.

The choir coming to Victoria will comprise 112 boys.

The school is the only one in Canada affiliated with the Pontificial Institute of Sacred Music in Rome.

Classes range in size from under 30 to six. There are 15 choir school teachers in regular contact with fewer than 100 boys at high school level. This does not count the teachers they meet in private weekly lessons.

The entire staff of the school is 34 teachers including four priests, laymen and lay women.

The school is at 66 Bond St., Toronto.

Christ Church Cathedral host

World resources theme for conference of deans

The proper use of Canadian natural resources is the theme for the annual conference of cathedral deans of North America which will be held in the Memorial Hall of Christ Church Cathedral from April 21 to 25.

The yearly conferences began in 1954.

Dean Francis Sayre Jr. of Washington Cathedral in Washington, D.C., was first host to the conference. He was host again one year ago.

Last year, in summing up the yearly meetings, Sayre said that the spirit of relaxed camaraderie had been a genuine joy to many a dean who might be "pondering what strange and maverick beast a dean may be and specifically what is special about a cathedral's mission for the Lord."

"To help all of us in our quest for an appropriate answer," he said, "we travel year by year to one or another cathedral, even having gone as far afield as Coventry in England and St. Peter's in Rome."

"There we ask our host dean to share his understanding of the world's needs, hopes and problems as particularly represented in his community, and how he sees his cathedral undertaking to meet them.

"Secular leaders of every sort are mobilized in that community to help our host in his presentation.

"Then, in discussion and repartee, and usually through field excursions to the scene of action, we try to perceive more vividly God's work in the world."

This year in Victoria leading men of industry will address the deans' meetings and the deans will go to the University of Victoria for a demonstration of the project Man in Cold Water which resulted in the design of a flotation jacket for yachtsmen and mariners.

At the 10:30 a.m. Sunday eucharist during the conference the deans will concelebrate the eucharist, led by Dean Stanley Rodgers of Grace Church Cathedral, San Francisco.

Indiana schools must replace Christian book

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana violated the constitutional separation of church and state by adopting a biology textbook that stresses the Bible's Genesis version of how life began on earth over the theory of evolution, a judge ruled here.

The ninth-grade text, A Search For Order in Complexity, has caused controversies in at least five states. The Indiana case is the first to reach the courts.

"The question is whether a text obviously designed to present only the view of Biblical creationism in a favorable light is constitutionally acceptable in the public schools of Indiana. Two hundred years of constitutional government demand that the answer be no," Judge Michael T. Dugan of Marion County Superior Court said.

Dugan said adoption of the textbook violated the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment, which says there shall be "no law respecting an establishment of religion."

He said the court took no position as to the validity of evolution or Biblical creationsim.

"The asserted object of the text to present a balanced or neutral argument is a sham that breaches that wall of separation between church and state voiced by Thomas Jefferson," the judge ruled. "Any doubt of the text's fairness is dispelled by the demand for correct Christian answers demanded by the Teacher's Guide," he said.

Inspiration —by books

Inspirational books now are a multi-million dollar business in North America, partly due to the efforts of Successful Living Inc., which uses a direct sales approach to the secular marketplace.

Successful Living utilizes a network of independent dealers and distributors, and uses the Tupperware home "party" approach to spread Christian literature.

The firm will be active in this area next week with praise rallies at the Empress, Monday at 7:30 p.m., and at the Malaspina Hotel in Nanaimo on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Featured speaker will be Walter Seward of Winnipeg, who is Canadian president of Successful Living.

Editor named to office

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. DeCourcy H. Rayner, 67, has been elected official nominee for the office of moderator of the 103rd Presbyterian General Assembly, it was announced here.

Rayner, editor for the last 18 years of the Presbyterian Record, the church's national magazine, was chosen by ballot over seven other ministers, the Presbyterian Church in Canada said in a statement.

The general assembly opens June 5 in St. Andrew' Church, Toronto.

Rayner was born in Hamilton and holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Toronto. He attended Knox College and served as a missionary in South America after graduation.

During the Second World War, he served as a chaplain with the RCAF in Canada and overseas. He was appointed editor of the Presbyterian Record in 1958 after 12 years as secretary of the Canadian Bible Society in Montreal.

A taste of Jewish rituals

Members of St. Mark's and St. Christopher's Anglican Lenten study group concluded their series on comparative religion with a Passover Seder or rite conducted by Victoria rabbi Dr. Leon Abrami and his wife, Susan, in St. Mark's Hall.

The 16 Anglican participants were surprised at the absence of "pious solemnity" and an abundance of merriment in the singing and games during the meal.

Shopping for the meal included the purchase of matzos, Israeli wine, horseradish, celery and parsley. The rabbi furnished a roasted egg, a shank bone and the haroset (made from chopped apple, nuts, cinnamon and wine), which were displayed on a large silver tray.

Rabbi Abrami explained each part of the meal as it progressed. The matzos are symbolic of the bread baked in haste without yeast as the ancient Hebrews fled from Egypt at midnight more than 3,000 years ago. During the meal the door was opened symbolically as a gesture to the poor and needy and again, later, to Elijah — the wine cup used in the rite was referred to as "Elijah's cup."

Arrangements for the Passover Seder were made by Chris Birtwistle with assistance from Rev. Peter Isles.

The special course was arranged by James Ross of Spectrum Community School to include visits by Kartar Singh Kumar, a Sikh, and Sakya Lama Tashi Namgyal, a Tibetan lama who fled his country during the Communist takeover.

Orthodox group to gather

On Tuesday, in keeping with the tradition of the Holy Theophany Orthodox Church members will gather in the Royal Oak Cemetery to visit graves for radonitsa (rejoicing.)

Prayers for the dead are prohibited during Pascha (Easter) and the "bright week" following, but will be mingled with Paschal hymns of rejoicing on this occasion. Flowers, Easter eggs, grains of wheat and candles are left on the graves as symbols of the resurrection. This tradition is observed by all Orthodox Christians in their native lands — Greeks, Russians, Serbs, Syrians, Romanians and Bulgarians.

The Victoria church, which is located at 3801 Cadboro Bay Road, will be represented by their priest, Rev. Fr. Gleb Jensen, and members of the congregation at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

'We're closer'

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Concern for suffering in underdeveloped countries has brought Roman Catholics and Protestants closer together than at any time in history, the newly-elected president of the Ontario Conference of Catholic Bishops says.

Most Rev. Alexander Carter of Sault Ste. Marie, told a regular Sunday service at St. Andrew's United Church here that the common cause among Canadian churches to assist the dispossessed and the hungry has increased fellowship among all denominations.

AT THE GALLERIES

An informal introducton to new works by five artists — characterized by the gallery as a "non-exhibition" — will open Sunday at The Maples Gallery, corner West Saanich and Keating's Cross-Road.

The works include oils, watercolors, serigraphs and etchings and the artists, with the exception of Mimi Jones, are unfamiliar in this area. They are Jack Darcus, B.J. Drummond, Doreen Leiberman, J. B. Payne and Miss Jones.

The non-exhibition will continue through April 30.

Open Space Gallery presents an exhibition of paintings and drawings by young Victoria artists Gordon Hughes, Greg Sharpe and Alan Jones. It is to be seen currently and will continue through April 30 at the temporary location, 1960 Government.

The three are recent students of the Northwest Coast Institute of the Arts in Victoria and participated in a group show by Institute artists at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria a year ago. Hughes and Sharpe have also exhibited this year at the Backroom Gallery.

Each of the three works in a different medium. Jones is acrylic on canvas as regards the pieces in this exhibition. Sharpe is represented by studies gouache and Hughes, works are mainly in pencil.

At the Backroom Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay, drawings by Geoffrey Rock are on view through April 23; at Utley's, 9182 East Saanich, recent paintings by James Gordaneer, RCA, until April 24, and at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, landscapes, seascapes, portraits and florals by Eileen Walters, Clarice Renaud and Vi Hargreaves can be seen through Friday.

The Victoria Society of Artists is presenting an exhibition of oils, acrylics, watercolors and pastels in the Princess Room of the Princess Mary Restaurant, Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Flute, Piano In Concert

A previously postponed flute and piano concert is to take place at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Sunday, at 3 p.m. The artists are Barbara Eadie, flute, and Edward Norman, piano.

Their program will consist of music by J. S. Bach, Andre Caplet, Schubert, Charles Koechlin and Alredo Casella.

Ms. Eadie has studied in New York and London. She is now teaching at Camosun College and has performed with Victoria Symphony on several occasions.

Navy Ships Open Again

The submarine HMCS Ojibwa and the destroyer-helicopter HMCS Athabaskan will be open to the general public from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Both vessels are tied up at B jetty in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt.

String Concert At The Belfry

A dual recital of variations on 25 strings will feature artists Randy Rain and Ian McConkey at The Belfry, Sunday at 8 p.m. Rain has performed in solo concerts across North America and his musical influences draw on a wide variety of idioms. He has played an important part in having the dulcimer recognized as a sensitive and versatile instrument.

McConkey, who has taught at Victoria Conservatory and made numerous television and concert appearances, both as soloist and with Trio Victoria, has studied with guitar virtuosi around the world, including Segovia's master class in Spain, and has performed concerts in Europe, the United States and Canada.

Tickets are $3 for adults, $2.50 for students and senior citizens and are available at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, or reserve by phone, 385-6815.

'International Bazaar' At Pearson College

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Around-the-clock cultural programs starting at 10 a.m. will be a feature of the first international bazaar to be held at the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific, April 23.

The programs cover a wide gamut of arts and entertainment, from folk songs to chamber music. They will take place at the new Max Bell Hall, marking the opening of the $700,000 360-seat theatre which is the gift of the Max Bell Foundation. Bell, who died in 1972, was chairman of FP Publications, the parent company of Victoria Press Ltd.

The theatre is built on a hill overlooking the campus and contains an auditorium, art room, three music practice rooms, dressing rooms and a scenery shop. It will be used for the drama and music programs of the College as well as by the community.

The day-long festival and bazaar, organized by Dr. Richard Liu, will include buffets and dinner consisting of a variety of international foods prepared by students and served in the cedar dining hall overlooking Pedder Bay, or to be eaten outdoors if patrons desire and weather permits.

Some home-made delicacies, student-built birdhouses, school music records and other souvenirs will be on sale from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

An art exhibition will display student products in pottery, weaving and stained glass; photographs dealing with college life; paintings of the South American artist, Maria Elena Maldonado; Chinese caligraphy by Dr. Liu and, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., a demonstration of calligraphy by Chinese and Japanese students.

Uruguayan landscape artist Maldonado, now teaching at Pearson College, has given four oil paintings to be auctioned in connection with the exhibition. She has had exhibitions of her paintings in various United States galleries and many are in private and gallery collections in both South and North America.

Entertainment will begin at 10 a.m. with a program of Indian, Norwegian, Spanish and Philippine dances. At 12:15 p.m. there will be a musical performance which will include Pearson College Choir and other student performances under the direction of Edgar Samuel, with the Kopanitsa Dancers as guests.

Ukrainian Dancers, an antique costume show by the Canadiana Costume Society and an assortment of folk songs from many lands are scheduled for a two-hour program beginning at 2:45 p.m. Special artist is Brad Myers, now a Pearson College instructor in Anthropology and the art of stained glass, but a former professional Canadian folk singer.

A balakaika orchestra and a Spanish play are among other treats. A particular star of the day-long program is Ernie Philip, full-blooded Shuswap Indian and winner of many international dance competitions. He has been named Grand Champion 17 times in his career.

Culmination of the festival comes in the evening with a gala concert which will feature Robin Wood, pianist, Edgar Samuel, bass, with a selection of songs, and Trio Victoria performing the Piano Trio in A minor by Ravel.

Wood will play a Chopin group consisting of four Mazurkas and the B-flat minor Scherzo. Pianist-cellist Gail O'Riordan will accompany Samuel, a singer with an impressive international background.

Members of Trio Victoria are Wood, Sydney Humphreys, violin, and James Hunter, cello.

To encourage a maximum public attendance at the unqie ev ent, the college will provide free hourly bus service starting at 9 a.m. from 700 Humboldt. Parking lot facilities there will be available without charge.

For those taking their cars out to the college, parking will be at Weir's Beach Resort and vans will be provided to shuttle guests back and forth. Tickets are $2 ($1 for students and senior citizens) for each daytime event and $5 and $2.50 for the evening concert.

They are available in Victoria at Munro's Books, Don Mee Restaurant and YM-YWCA and in Colwood at Smitty's Pancake House and the United Pharmacy, or call Pearson College, 478-5591.

This global 12-hour festival-bazaar has been arranged for the purpose of raising a scholarship fund to bring students to the college from countries disrupted by internal warfare.

All students at Pearson College are attending on full scholarships provided by their own governments, Canadian provincial and federal governments, corporations, foundations and individuals. They are selected purely on their own merit without regard to race, religion or economic background. Forty-four countries and Canada's 10 provinces and two territories are represented in the current enrolment.

There are three such united world colleges, the other two being in Wales and Singapore. Their vision is the fostering of international understanding and dialogue.

MALDONADO . . . donates paintings

Student Concert

A special student concert at Victoria Conservatory of Music, Sunday at 3 p.m., will present seven senior Conservatory students who are recipients of British Columbia Cultural Fund scholarships.

They are Judith Allan, Robert Holiston, Richard Margison, Deborah Millar, Walter Prossnitz, Susan Pye and Roger Scobie. There is no charge for the concert.

Drama Festival

Best of community theatre is to be highlighted in the B.C. Drama Association South Island Drama Festival, which takes place Wednesday through Saturday at Parkland Secondary School, McDonald Park Road, Sidney. Curtain time is 8 p.m. each night.

City Vocalists Give Concert

Three Victoria singers will join together next Friday in a vocal concert under the title, Songs of the British Isles, at St. Matthias Church Hall, Richardson, corner of Richmond. They are Peggy Walton Packard, soprano, Robert Hall, tenor, and Edgar Samuel, bass.

The program will span several centuries, from the time of Elizabeth I to the present, and will include songs from each of the four countries represented in the British Isles.

The concert will be repeated at Metropolitan Church Hall on Pandora, April 29. Starting time for both is 8 p.m.

Ms. Packard received advanced training at New York's Juilliard School and in Philadelphia and has been soloist in major symphony and other performances in this city. Hall studied with George Corwin at UVic and with Selena James at the Conservatory of Music and has been guest soloist with Amity Singers and in UVic productions, including a performance of the Bach B minor Mass.

A teacher of music at Pearson College, Samuel has sung in Europe and England, has had his own BBC television program and made several records.

No Problems in This Talented Family

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Sons and daughters of famous parents have often been seen to have special problems living up to what the world unreasonably expects of them. And sibling rivalries are known to be aggravated sometimes when there is a brilliant brother or sister in the family.

But it doesn't have to be that way. Much depends on the strength of the family as a unit, the diplomacy and understanding with which the parents handle possible rivalries and open avenues of communication between family members.

One member of a closely knit and much gifted Vancouver family was in Victoria this week as a prelude to giving a Belfry performance on April 24.

She is charming Jane Mortifee, who has been making rapid progress in a music-theatre career based purely on her own special talents and personality, and not on the name made famous by her older singing sister, Ann.

She has, of course, been conscious of the need to break away from Ann's style and direction. Most of us will drift into a pre-set pattern unless we establish a personal goal and deliberately steer toward it.

'But Ann has always been a great help to me," says Jane. "She's most supportive and I owe her a great deal. We're mutually very sympathetic."

Jane is one of those fortunate people to whom singing is a natural thing which, according to many excellent teachers, is precisely what it should be. Not for Jane the years of struggle to focus the voice and bring it into the correct registers.

Without formal training, she has a well-placed accurately tuned voice, a sense of style and a musical-poetic nature that has made it easy for her not only to sing delightfully the songs of others but to write her own — both words and music.

The most inhibiting thing for Jane was an extreme shyness about singing in public and when she entered U.B.C. she decided to take theatre as an aid in overcoming the shyness.

She left the university with a theatre arts degree and having achieved her goal and proven herself a competent actress, has become busy with professional theatre roles with the David H. Y. Lui Theatre, City Stage and the Arts Club. Her first professional engagement was in Godspell and she was also a member of the cast of Lui's production of Jacques Brel.

MORTIFEE

In between plays and concerts — she likes to do three or four every six to eight months — Jane keeps busy with plays and doing radio and TV commercials.

"I've learned more about singing from those than from anything else I've done," she says. "You have to keep doing a thing over until it's right and you're always listening to yourself intently."

Having a keen ear, Jane began playing the guitar at the age of 12 but is only now beginning to teach herself to read music and learn basic musical essentials, much of it through her hosts of musical friends.

A large and close family that includes a musically gifted brother, Jane says that this summer they will be going to Europe as a group. But Jane's individual needs will still be served by the trip, thanks to a chance meeting.

"I did background vocals for the Rolf Harris shows," she says, "and a visitor — Val Doonican — heard me and was really interested. He has his own BBC television show in London and said he could probably find a spot for me."

In her Belfry appearance on April 24, Jane will be supported by an instrumental ensemble and will present a program covering a variety of styles, she says, including some of her own songs.

Classical Recitals

Two classical music recitals scheduled for Wednesday provide a considerable choice for dedicated concert-goers. At St. John's Church, Quadra at Balmoral, the fine organ will be heard in the first of two recitals to be given by Edward Norman. Works by Bach, Reger, Durufle and Flor Peeters have been selected, as well as short works from the early Italian and modern English repertoire.

Admission is $2 and the recital begins at 8 p.m.

At Craigdarroch Castle, a faculty and student recital will emphasize the delicate early sounds of recorders and harpsichord with the soprano voices of Dawn Hood and Karen Smith. Instrumentalists are Paul Palmer and James Kennedy, recorders, and Peggy Palmer, harpsichord.

DO YOU NEED space for your television, hi-fi system, desk, storage and book shelves all in one storage wall — a big order! But this storage wall fills the bill while still achieving an almost sculptural quality in a wonderful interplay of solids and space. While avoiding any feeling of crowding or heaviness, this system manages to use almost every bit of wall for useful storage. And, to add even more to the appeal, the whole wall is made up of easy-to-build, efficient boxes. Here's a built-in that can be almost entirely prefabricated and finished, then just fastened to the wall. No long, drawn-out building mess where you live. The individual boxes are made entirely of hardwood plywood, so they go together with the greatest of ease. Smouldering Grand Canyon Fire Destroying Priceless Relics

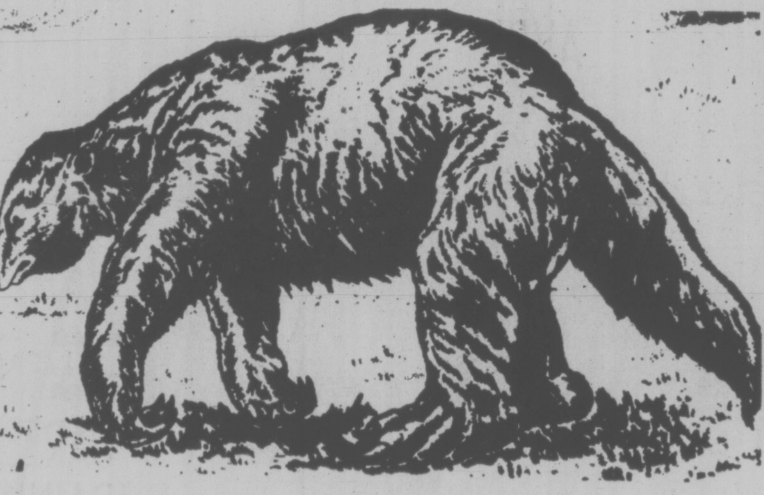
By BOYCE RENSBERGER
New York Times



Artist's conception of giant sloth

NEW YORK — One of the world's richest known sources of fossils and other evidence of life in the ice age is slowly burning up in a cave in the Grand Canyon, but the authorities say any effort to put out the fire must await completion of paper work required by the federal agencies involved.

The fire, which was discoverd last July and has been smoldering ever since, is in thick layers of dried dung deposited by a species of ground sloth about as large as a bear. The sloth lived in North America until about 10,000 years ago.

The dung, deposited repeatedly over a period of at least 30,000 years, contains recognizable bits of vegetation that indicate how the natural habitat changed over that period.

Buried in the dung are the bones of many forms of extinct animals apparently dragged into the cave by pack rats. There are entire skeletons of newborn baby sloths that suggest the cave may have been used by sloths to deliver their young, some of which were born dead.

Scientists have excavated fossils and dung samples from the cave off and on since the 1930's, and many believe that the deposits can still yield vast quantities of information about plants, animals and climates of the prehistoric past.

Although the dung is only five feet deep, samples from various depths have been dated by the radiocarbon method at intervals to about 40,000 years ago, the method's limit. Older deposits of dung, undatable by existing methods, may be twice as old.

"I would compare the fire in Rampart Cave to a fire in a major wing of a natural history museum," said Dr. Paul Martin, an expert on ice age mammals at the University of Arizona, who has done research in the cave in recent years.

"It's been six months since there was any aggressive effort to deal with the fire, and I'm getting impatient," Martin said in a telephone interview.

According to Roger Giddings, an assistant to the superintendent of the national park, the fire was discovered last July 14 by someone boating down the Colorado River. An iron gate at the cave's mouth had been bent open, suggesting that campers or vandals had set the fire.

There were no open flames, but the slow smouldering deep within the dried dung was producing a lot of heat and smoke. Giddings compared the burning to that of a peat or bog fire that smoulders for many months.

When park firefighters sprayed water from the river onto the dung, he said, clouds of steam penetrated the cave's limestone ceiling and huge chunks of weakened rock fell down. Fearing for their safety, the firefighters retreated.

Giddings said it was decided to seal off the cave in the hope that the fire would be extinguished by a lack of oxygen. Double bulkheads were built near the mouth of the cave, and it was abandoned until January 17.

"They went back to see what happened, and found it was still full of smoke and heat," Giddings said. "They couldn't tell how much damage had been done."

Meanwhile, the Mining Enforcement Safety Administration, a sister agency of the National Park Service in the department of the interior, advised park officials that it would be unsafe to enter the cave unless the walls and ceilings could be shored up with timbers.

Giddings said the officials were waiting for the mine safety agency to supply the needed technical assistance to make the cave safe before trying again to put out the fire.

"No amount of history or whatever the archeologists are dealing with there is worth risking anybody," Riley said. "We'll assist the parks people if it's decided within the department of the interior that that's what we should do. So far, I'm not sure the park service has made the official request yet."

Counterfeit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police have warned that at least 15 good-quality counterfeit $20 bills have been circulated in the city during the past two weeks. Fraud squad detectives said a quartet of confidence men and women have been passing American bills that bear serial numbers L80074271C and G2564017, usually singling out corner grocery stores and fast-food restaurants.

The church was adorned with blue and yellow floral standards. Karen-Anne, on the arm of her father, was lovely in a full length white polyester satin and lace gown with extending train. Her shoulder length veil was crowned with a Dutch cap of seed pearls and lace. She carried a white Bible, which had belonged to her paternal grandmother, with red and white roses and white streamers. She wore a cultured pearl necklace, a gift from the groom. The maid of honour, in yellow polyester satin, was Miss Teresa Horrocks, sister of the bride. She carried blue daisies with baby's breath and yellow streamers, and had matching headpiece. Bridesmaids, dressed alike in light blue polyester satin, were Miss Judy Guyader, Miss Donna Robinson, cousin of the bride, and Miss Nancy Aubry, sister of the groom. They carried yellow daisies and baby's breath with blue streamers and had matching headpieces. Hurlburt—Luney

Oak Bay United Church was the setting for the March 12, 1977, double-ring ceremony between Laura Janet Luney, elder daughter of Mrs. P. W. Moore, Victoria, and the late Mr. Wm. L. Luney, and John Kenneth Hurlburt, younger son of Mrs. Mildred Hurlburt, Winnipeg, and the late Mr. Wm. Hurlburt. The vows were exchanged before the Rev. W. Z. Van Druten. During the signing of the Register, the choir, under the direction of Mr. Bob Kroeger, sang "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring".

The bride, accompanied down the aisle by her stepfather, Mr. Pat Moore, was lovely in her David Rae original wedding gown of silk crepe and Swiss Guipure lace. The beautiful lace enhanced the picture neckline and fitted bodice, and edged the cuffs of long slim sleeves, repeated again down in panels of the gown's full skirt and around the long train. A capulet of lace flowers and pearls held a waist-length veil of illusion tulle edged in the same matching lace. She wore a pearl necklace and earrings, gift of the groom, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and ivy. Maid of honour, Miss Lesley Luney, sister of the bride, and bridesmaid Miss Lynn Jones, were very pretty in identical, long sleeve navy blue and white seersucker gowns, trimmed with lace. They carried bouquets of colonial white daisies, yellow carnations and baby's breath. The groom chose an Edwardian style black tuxedo. John Elves was best man, and the ushers were Dave Adams and Richard Smith. They wore matching tuxedos. The mother of the bride chose a Dubarry pink gown with V-neckline and jewelled waist, topped by a fingertip length jacket. She wore a gardenia corsage. YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE
Attention to all residents of the City of Victoria: Your city's watchdog has known since last October, 1976, that a certain number of the Victoria Police Force were being trained at the B.C. College in Vancouver. Your city's watchdog does not blame the Victoria City Police Administration for not having foot patrols on Victoria streets, but when the members of City Council deleted over $200,000 from the 1976 police salaries budget, then I think it's time the people of the city of Victoria demanded that a minimum of $200,000 be included in the 1977 budget for 10 extra policemen for foot patrols now. Please sign the petition at the Palace News on Fort St. or for for further information phone the City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards, 383-6259. P.S. Victoria has hired former policemen from other police forces in the past.

WERE 40 NOW 12 NEW HOMES FROM $64,750

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath

"I'M A LITTLE BIT COUNTRY"

I'm a 1,200 sq. ft. rancher and I'm normally a warm, cozy home with natural wood panelling to highlight my FP, and 3 good-sized bedrooms (master 17'3"x11'3") with H-W floors throughout. I have a large kitchen with built-in stove and oven. My feature window in the LR looks out over the large patio, up and over terraced gardens past a 12'x19' garden shed to a forrested park-like property behind. I have a 250 sq. ft. workshop (wired). My owners are transferred to Florida, and I need another nice family to live with me. $54,900.

Waterland 'Ignorance And Bluff'

HOPE (CP) — Forestry Minister Tom Waterland was accused of "operating on arrogance and bluff" after a two-hour public meeting Friday on the controversial spraying program to combat western budworm in the Fraser Canyon.

Tom Davis of Hope, one of 100 persons at the meeting, asked the minister if he was prepared to hold a plebiscite on whether chemical sprays should be used in the area.

Waterland said the decision would be made on scientific evidence and not emotionalism, adding that it will depend on the proliferation of the budworm when site tests are taken in late May or early June.

The minister stressed that the consensus of scientific evidence is that the chemicals orethene and sevin-4-oil are safe if properly used and said he had been assured the chemicals last only three to four days at strength, with no trace left within 30 days.

But Waterland had to retract his earlier assurances that orthene is on the permanent registry of the federal agriculture department.

Merriam Doucet, of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, insisted the chemical has only a temporary registry for use in forests and Dr. Roy Shepherd, a forest entomologist, confirmed her statement.

One man at the meeting asked why the government had spent $396 on a full-age advertisement in the local newspaper, giving its side of the story about the proposed spraying.

The man said residents want equal time and money to present the views of their experts.

The minister said if anyone can provide technical knowledge not already considered by the scientists, he would ensure it would be properly evaluated.

He told the meeting the spray problem could be stopped at any time if it could definitely be proved the chemicals are harmful to health.

Doucet said it has bewen found that orthene breaks down into a chemical for a time called monotor-4, which is 46 times more toxic than the original orthene.

She also said carbaryl in sevin-4-oil has produced birth defects in five dirrerent species of mammals.

Rivulets, weather and downdraft from helicopter rotor blades during spray application all make it impossible to continue the chemicals to specific sites.

Waterland said the purpose of the spray is to protect the environment, as well as the economy of the region. He said if the budworm is left untreated there is a good chance it would destroy the timber that is now providing a $3.5-million payroll to families in the canyon.

John Ingwersen of Yale later told the minister: "You are operating on arrogance and bluff. You have given no answers to our questions."

FIVE FIRES

Five fires that broke out in a half-hour period late Friday night were deliberately set, Victoria fire officials said today.

The fires, three set in garbage cans, one in an awning and the fifth at a demolition site, were quickly extinguished and caused little damage.

DOGS KILL 4 DEER

At least three fawns and a buck have been killed by dogs at Fort Rodd Hill national park in the past two weeks, a commissioner working there said today.

Luther Johnson said there are two dogs there who have been running deer for two years and calls to animal protection officers have produced no action.

SECRET GOV'T REPORT

Farm Market Boards Hiking Food Costs

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A confidential government document, obtained by The Montreal Star, raises devastating questions about farm marketing boards and suggests they are forcing up food prices while damaging the competitiveness of Canadian agriculture.

The document, prepared by the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, calls for "a major research effort into the effects of government regulation on market competition in selected agricultural industries."

It recommends that the study start with commodities now produced under a federal or provincial supply management program — chicken, turkey, eggs and dairy products.

Dated Feb. 21, 1977, the paper was apparently presented at a private seminar on agriculture competition in Ottawa, March 20.

It has been carefully shielded from the public.

The document states that the bureau of competition policy "has a clearly defined responsibility" to review the policies of some marketing boards and to report its findings to the government, the agribusiness community and the public.

The 60-page document offers substantial evidence that:

—Consumers are being forced to pay extraordinarily high prices for some products, because of the activities of marketing boards;

—Rather than protecting the family farm, marketing boards may be hastening its demise;

—Production of some commodities has become seriously "balkanized" in Canada;

—Efforts to control the supply of products reaching the market have created other costly distortions in the agriculture industry.

As one example, it notes that during the second week of January average retail prices for fresh broiler chicken in Vancouver was $1.09 a pound compared with 63 cents in Toronto.

"This represents an average price differential of 46 cents per pound, or 73 per cent, between the two markets.

"When the lowest quoted retail prices were compared, the spread widened to 62 cents per pound — a differential of greater than 130 per cent," the paper states.

It adds that the situation is not unique to British Columbia.

"Unexplained price differentials continue to exist between other provinces and, in many regions, between Canada and the United States," it says.

"Only in Ontario and, to a lesser extent, Quebec do (broiler) prices appear to have been under any significant and consistent downward pressure from U.S. imports," the document states.

It adds that provincial marketing boards are able to limit outside competition either as a result of marketing board regulations or voluntary "gentlemen's agreements" on the part of boards or processors.

"One of the factors contributing to the 'stability' of the B.C. market has been Import Order No. 1, a regulation passed in August, 1970, by the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board prohibiting the sale of 'out-of-province' product without prior Board approval," the paper says.

It adds that supply management programs operating under federal jurisdiction also include provision for restrictive quotas on competing imports — thus raising prices to consumers.

A proposai is currently under consideration to establish a similar program for broiler chickens, and the federal department of agriculture is also reviewing "the feasibility of a supply management program for the beef industry."

The confidential document notes that there is growing public concern regarding the effect of government regulation on competition in the marketplace — and it lists 27

WOMAN GETS HER MONEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Surrey woman, who took legal action against Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm after his department's refusal to increase her welfare benefits, will get more money.

David Mossop, lawyer for Mohini O'Toole, said Friday the welfare department has agreed to pay O'Toole $50 a month for the first four months of this year, but not for December, 1976.

O'Toole claimed that she was entitled to $50 a month more than the $371.25 a month she was receiving. The appeal board upheld her claim that families of handicapped persons are entitled to be treated like single-parent families.

The government still plans to challenge the appeal.

Carter Backs Port Angeles Pipelines

Times News Services

SEATTLE — President Carter will call for construction of either the Northern Tier pipeline from Port Angeles or a trans-Canada pipeline from Kitimat, or both, depending on Canada's reaction.

A copyrighted story in the Ridder Newspapers said Carter's recommendation will be included in his energy message to Congress on Wednesday.

Northern Tier's proposal calls for construction of an oil tanker superport at Port Angeles and a new 1,500-mile pipeline from Puget Sound to Clearbrook, Minn.

Residents of Port Angeles fiercely oppose the plan.

NEWS BRIEFS

Festivities Revived

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's office announced plans Friday to revive celebrations on July 1, a national holiday variously known as Canada Day or Dominion Day. Traditional celebrations were cancelled last year in the name of austerity.

May Vote in Spain

MADRID (AP) — Spain has set June 15 as the date for the first free parliamentary elections in 41 years, and the newly-legalized Communists announced a slate of candidates.

Hijack Pact Dies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The only agreement negotiated by the United States and Cuba during their long political antagonism died quietly at midnight Friday. The 1973 anti-hijacking accord expired six months after Cuban President Fidel Castro renounced it.

Back in Tower

EDMONTON (CP) — Six senior officials with the Indian affairs department were back in their 27th-floor offices in the CN Tower today after being placed in nearby basement quarters on Tuesday. See Story on Page 31.

Cars Need Repairs

CALGARY (CP) — A six-week Alberta-wide RCMP campaign has revealed one in every 15 cars on the road needs repair. A policespokesman said RCMP manned 630 check points during February and March, stopping more than 15 000 vehicles and charging 270 persons for having faulty equipment.

Flooded Town Blasts Ice Dam

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — Blasters dynamited the Athabasca River with a 600-pound charge Friday to break up a 12-foot thick ice jam and stop flooding in this Athabasca oilsands boom town.

Water fell four feet overnight, Bill Szabon, department of environment engineer, said this morning.

"But it is not like Moses dividing the Red Sea — it will take a little time before things are back to normal, Szabon said..

This community of 18,000 in northeastern Alberta remained in a state of emergency as police and disaster service officials watched the water mark.

About 1,500 people were evacuated when flood waters spilled into a 60-square block area in the northeastern section of the town, much of it a mobile home site.

Government officials estimated over-all damage at between $3 and $4 million.

Chuck Knight, town administrator, said the flood was caused by the breakup of the Athabasca River above the town Thursday. Ice stopped the downstream flow and the water backed up the Clearwater River and caused flooding.

Harley Bricker, town disaster services volunteer co-ordinator, said the river rose nine inches an hour for about 11 hours at one point.

"We had to get sand bags from the Great Canadian Oil Sands plant and more from Edmonton to try and block off the flood waters," he said. "Heavy equipment operators and trucks worked all night bringing gravel from a pit to form a dyke."

RCMP Insp. James Quin said the taverns and the liquor store were closed Thursday night to prevent fights and other incidents and enable officers to concentrate on the emergency.

About 100 families slept in arenas, gymnasiums, Keyano College, and a construction camp, eating their meals in schools.

MURDER SEARCH

PORT ALBERNI — RCMP today launched an intensive search for the killer of a 12-year-old girl whose body was found near here Friday.

Police said the body of Carolyn Lee, daughter of a Port Alberni restaurant owner, was discovered at 5 p.m. by searchers combing a wooded area a mile west of the city limits.

Police would not say how the girl died.

Police do not know if she was picked up or where she went. The dance studio is only three blocks away from her home.

Her parents reported her missing early that night and a search was started.

School Tax Up One Mill

Education Minister Pat McGeer announced Friday the provincial average mill rate for school taxes this year will increase to 47.5 mills from 46.5 for 1976.

The mill rate is the multiple used in calculating municipal taxes once the assessment levels have been set. Actual mill rates for each district will vary.

McGeer said in a news release the mill rate consists of a basic levy of 37.5 mills set by the government to cover the school district share of the basic education program.

In addition, a mill rate is calculated for each district to cover operating costs over and above the basic education program, debt and capital charges, and the cost of operating community colleges in those districts where it is applicable, he said.

The minister said the 47.5 mills is predicated on an over-all increase in total school district budgets of 9.5 per cent above 1976. School boards have until May 1 to establish a final mill rate and to make any reductions in their budget — something which would result in a decrease of the rate.

Dr. McGeer said that the increase for this year came about mainly because of large surpluses in 1976 of more than $23 million.

He also announced the current ministerial estimates contain $3.7 million for special aid to 13 school districts in order to assist districts which have rapidly increasing enrolments and to bring excessive mill rates in districts with low assessed values into line with provincial ranges.

The minister also said that the average cost of the 14 community colleges to the 68 participating school districts will be 1.62 mills.

Skiers Frozen To Death

Times News Services

Searchers found the bodies of five West German skiers today frozen to death in a snowstorm which struck the resort region of Zermatt, Switzerland, near the Italian border.

Rescue officials identified them as vacationers who had been missing since setting out on a skiing trip Friday morning. A helicopter brought the bodies down to Zermatt, below the 14,326-foot Matterhorn peak.

The body of another West German victim of the blizzards ranging in the Valais Alps during the last few days was brought down to the valley today.

Shortly after dawn today helicopters rescued 10 skiers who had spent two days and nights sheltering from storms in igloos they made for themselves out of snow after being marooned at 9,000 feet in a nearby region.

The 10 lost their skis in an avalanche on the Chermontane Pass and were trapped while seven companions went for help. The igloos protected them against cold and fatigue, but several were suffering from frostbite and one had to be taken to hospital.

In Vienna, an avalanche today roared down on a construction site of the Arlberg mountain road tunnel, killed one worker and cut off an undetermined number of other workers from the outside world, police said.

The accident occurred on a remote site at an altitude of 6,600 feet on the Arlberg mountain where a road tunnel is being constructed.

Plain White Wrapper Sweeps French Stores

By PAUL WEBSTER
Manchester Guardian

PARIS — After a year's trial and controversy, the French have taken such a liking to products with no brand name that the experiment has spread to most of the big supermarket chains.

Just a year ago the leading French supermarket chain Carrefour was attacked by other shopping chains, advertising groups and manufacturers for starting a marketing campaign that deliberately set out to undermine the brand image.

It's "free products" made by well-known manufacturers were sold in plain white wrappers with little more information than the name of what was inside, such as biscuits or coffee, and miniscule type describing the ingredients.

Although it was claimed the product's quality was as good as any on the market the price was as much as a third less than its branded rival.

The main attack came from big food companies like Perrier, which said that damaging the brand name would help the cause of the Communists and Socialists in France and that wrapping products in white paper was following the example of Moscow and Peking.

Advertising companies called for a boycott of the supermarket chain, although several worked secretly on the company's huge "free product" campaign using the symbol of an albatross flying in a blue sky.

Although the immediate effect was to reduce prices, consumer groups refused to endorse the initiative feeling that it was a "loss leader" campaign, which would fizzle out. Since then at least two Carrefour no-name products have been awarded "best buy" status by consumer magazines.

The original 50 no-brand products have been doubled and manufacturers who shunned Carrefour a year ago have agreed to package their goods in plain wrappers without direct supporting advertising. This is partly because Carrefour is now heading off a challenge from other shopping chains but it is also seen to be good business which sells brand products as well.

When competing directly against brand names, Carrefour claims it takes an average of 40 per cent of sales. For some products it is much higher. No-name liquid detergent accounts for 69 per cent of business with other high scores being made by breakfast foods, jam and shampoos.

Carrefour's claim that prices can be cut to the bone by dropping brand advertising and fancy packaging are supported by other supermarkets, some of whom are undercutting Carrefour. Six of its main rivals now have a range of goods that plagiarize the Carrefour idea.

The reason that some seem to be able to sell the same products from the same manufacturer at below the Carrefour prices is almost certainly due to their not launching major advertising campaigns to bring them to light.

Carrefour is marking the anniversary of its "revolution" with another huge promotion aimed at doubling the number of no-brand products by direct consultation by what it calls "a new sort of customer" who is no longer influenced by advertising.

Silver pellet in ear helps smokers to quit

More Than Six Million Hooked on Smoke Habit

"Tobacco is a dirty weed.
I like it.
It satisfies no normal need.
I like it.
It makes you thin, it makes you lean.
It takes the hair right off your bean.
It's the worst damn stuff
I've ever seen.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Graham Lee Hemminger was only 19 when he wrote that ditty in 1915. He knew the score. He was a smoker. He died at age 53.

Smokers have a tendency to die young. It's estimated that every time a smoker lights up a cigarette, he's shortening his life by about five minutes.

More than six million Canadians are hooked on the habit — 44.7 per cent of the adult population.

Last year they puffed away at a rate approaching 100 packs a second based on sales of 62.1 billion cigarettes.

It was a record year, up 7.6 per cent over the 57.7 billion cigarettes sold in 1975.

In the United States, which has 10 times Canada's population, the number of cigarettes sold was between 640 and 650 billion.

Tobacco is big business despite a growing awareness of the dangers in smoking.

In Canada it ranks in the top 40 manufacturing industries. Since 1970, it's been our fifth most valuable crop after wheat, barley, rape seed and flax. More than 4,000 farms cultivate the crop, mainly in Ontario but also in B.C., P.E.I. and Quebec. The industry employs 25,000 full-time and another 50,000 to 60,000 seasonally.

Tobacco is big business for governments. It is the fourth most important source of revenue for the federal government after income tax, sales tax and customs tax.

The combined federal and provincial taxes on tobacco products last year exceeded $1 billion. In B.C. 35.1 cents of the price of a pack of 20 cigarettes goes to taxes, 25.5 cents to the federal treasury, and 9.6 cents to the province.

The price of smoking in terms of health is staggering — beyond reckoning.

Smoking is linked to lung cancer, chest diseases such as emphysema and coronary spontaneous abortions, still-births and hyperkinetic behaviour.

It is a contributing cause of peptic ulcers, cancer of the bladder, and hernias. It is blamed for various gum diseases, loss of hearing, and even facial wrinkles.

ARNEIL

chances of a smoker developing lung cancer are about one in a 100, of developing emphysema, one in 10. Recent tests indicate smoking is one of the main contributors to fatal coronaries, the number one 'natural causes' killer.

Last year 713 persons in the heart attack. It is associated with pregnancy problems, Capital Region District died of coronary diseases, 119 of lung cancer, and 43 of chest diseases including 12 who had emphysema.

Regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil says cigarette smoking was associated with the majority of the deaths, and in the case of lung cancer, the vast majority.

Smoking is costly and deadly in other respects.

Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Heppell says in the past two years six persons have died and 24 been injured in city fires directly attributable to careless smoking.

Careless smoking, he says, caused 12 per cent of all the fires in Canada last year.

It is debatable whether the number of smokers is shrinking or getting larger. Spokesmen for the tobacco industry feel there is a small but steady increase based on an average two or three per cent growth in sales each year.

But a study by the federal government into Canadian farm economies noted that between 1965 an 1972 the number of smokers declined half a million, from 6.6 million to 6.15 million.

One trend is clear. More women, particularly young women are smoking these days than ever before. In 1970 24.9 per cent of females aged 15 to 19 smoked; in 1974 the percentage was 27.8. The number of male smokers in the same age group fell from 32.3 per cent to 29.5 per cent.

Indeed when Christopher Columbus discovered the New World he was said to have been awe-struck at the spectacle of Indians inhaling smoke through Y-shaped pipes they called tabacas.

He and subsequent explorers brought the plant to Europe and by 1600 tobacco was in fairly wide use. It was regarded then as a cure for 'vapors', a way, ironically, of cleansing the body and soul.

Tobacco owes its entire success to the narcotic it produces — niccotine. The plant itself is useless except for the drug which is a powerful insecticide, as toxic to man incidentally as it is to insect.

Researchers have counted 300 dfferent compounds in the manufactured cigarette of which at least five are known carcinogens, or cancer-causing agents.

The gases the burning cigarette gives off should make any smoker wonder why he persists with the habit.

They include: carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide methane, acetylene, formaldehyde, acetaldehyde, acroline, acetone, ammonia, nitrogen dioxide, hydrogen sulphide, menthanol, methyl chloride and hydrogen cyanide.

And, he says, he doesn't like it.

Quitting: It's Never Easy But There's Help

Nothing is as easy to master as a bad habit.

And smoking is one opf the easiest.

By the time a teenager finishes his first pack of cigarettes he or she tends to be hooked for life.

Those are the sentiments of Barbara Sletvik, a 27-year-old Victoria businesswoman who for 11 years smoked up to two packs a day.

Four years ago she joined Smoke Watchers. She started by cutting back her smoking to seven cigarettes a day and seven weeks later, got up one morning and said to herself "This is it."

She hasn't smoked since.

She's involved in Operation Kick It, an anti-smoking program initiated two years ago in British Columbia by the TB Christmas Seal Society.

Kick It made its debut in Victoria last fall when Royal Jubilee Hospital decided to offer the program to its 2,400 employees.

Dr. Ray LeHuquet, hospital medical director, says it was an instant hit.

"So many people have been applying for the course we've had to increase the instructing staff," he says.

Norma Halbert, of the hospital's employee health services, says three classes have been completed and two more are underway in the hospital complex.

The program has attracted wide interest in the community. It's now offered to employees at the Legislature, ICBC, B.C. Telephone, Eaton's and Glendale and Victoria General hospitals.

The course involves one 90-minute session a week for 11 weeks. Most classes have an enrolment of between 12 to 18.

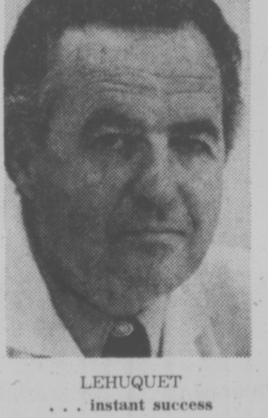
One of the attractions of the program is it is free. Another is most of the instructors are ex-smokers, like Barbara Sletvik, who can fully appreciate the agony their students are going through.

Barbara, who instructs two classes at Eric Martin Institute each week, says exercise, fresh air, and a well-balanced diet with plenty of vitamin B and C are exphasized. But the key to the program is helping smokers "unlearn" the habit.

First, she says, they have to really want to go through the ordeal.

Second they have to understand the causes of his habit.

And third, they have to be able to substitute good new habits.



LEHUQUET
. . . instant success

But it isn't easy, for smoking is more than a habit. Doctors say it's an addiction.

Ironically, recent studies have shown that well over half of all smokers would like to quit smoking.

The question is how.

The statistics are discouraging. According to the Christmas Seal Society for every person who gives up smoking for good, there are four who have tried and failed. And persons who give up spontaneously, cold turkey, on their own, have only a one in six chance of being successful.

Better results are normally achieved with the aid of therapy, drugs and group withdrawal programs.

Introduced in Victoria seven years ago and sponsored by the Seventh Day Adventist Church, it involves five consecutive evenings of films, lectures and group discussions. The cost is $20.

Dr. Herb Domke, a member of the centre, says between 250 to 300 persons go through the program each year. He says the initial success rate is 80 to 95 per cent; after six months, 50 to 60 per cent.

The impetus to kick the habit has driven persons to seek out other kinds of "cures" such as hypnotism and acupuncture.

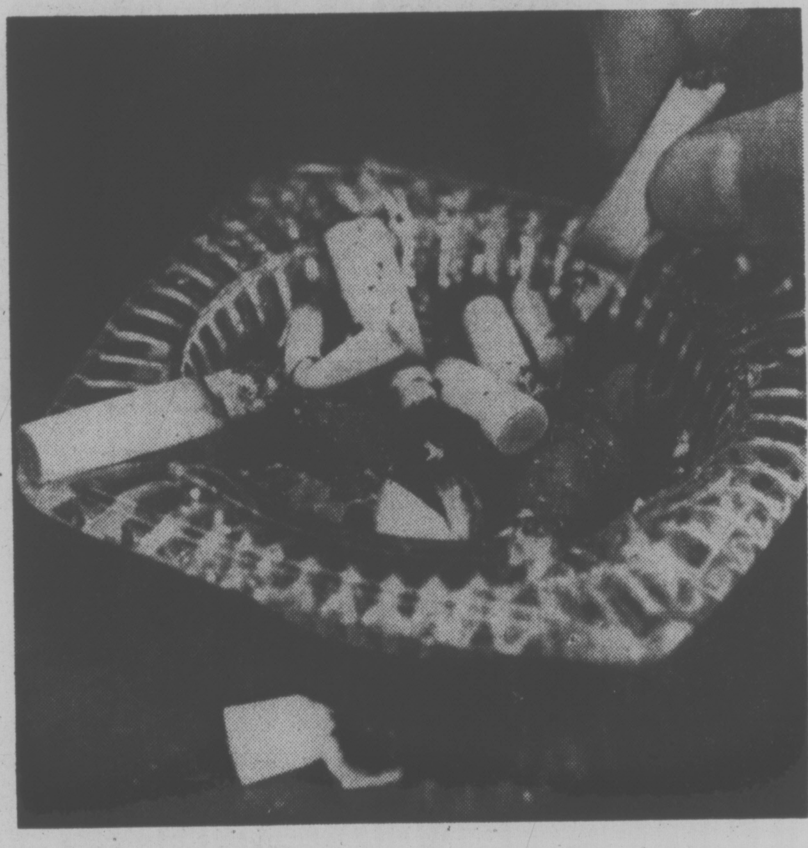
Jean Kozocari, a Victoria parapsychologist says she frequently uses hypnotism in helping people stop smoking and has found it highly effective. The catch is not everyone can be hypnotized.

Acupuncturist Dr. Harold Saita, of Victoria, treats smokers by pricking their ear lobes with a needle and then placing in the spot a small ionized silver pellet attached to the skin by adhesive tape.

When the person feels the urge to smoke he gently rubs his ears. The tape and pellet last a week or month but eventually fall off. By then it is assumed the smoker is no longer a smoker.

Regional health educator Ken Ainslie says the biggest hurdle is motivating people to do something about their smoking habit.

"It seems because of our political system perhaps, we are geared to persist in doing the things we know are bad until we're told absolutely to stop," he says.



Cigarettes: Health hazard lucrative for government

Building 'Bungled'

The renovated Law Courts Building on Burdett Avenue isn't completed yet so it's too soon to have its own ghosts — but it is gathering its own horror stories.

Horror stories about bureaucratic bungling, about three-walled rooms and bookshelves which keep going to Vancouver to be painted.

Cecil Branson, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said today the stories come from people working in the building who he believes to be sincere.

The case of the travelling bookshelves, for example, involved in moving the law library from the first to fourth floors.

Someone in the provincial department of public works decreed the metal bookshvles would be painted before they were relocated, Branson was told. For some reason he has never heard it had to be done in Vancouver.

So off half of them went, to return later. The paint started to peel. Back they went to Vancouver to be redone. Back again and this time they were somehow pitted.

Branson has heard, although he stresses he has not been able to confirm, that painting of bookshelves has run to $30,000.

About the room with just three walls. He explained that there used to be a barrister's lounge located alongside the law library. For convenience a door between the two was added, spring-loaded so it closed automatically and lawyers in the lounge didn't disturb those working in the library.

On the ground floor it worked well.

But when the lounge was created alongside the library on the fourth floor, those designing it used just three walls. Bookshelves, which did not reach to the ceiling, were used to form the separating wall.

Branson said complaints have got that problem fixed. Meanwhile other issues raised by the bar association in a rare public blast last month have so far produced nothing but promises.

In a 10-page brief the association attacked the government's lack of concern over mixing the judiciary and executive arm of law, enforcement by giving Crown counsel office space in the enlarged building.

The lawyers said millions of dollars appear to have been wasted as the work dragged on, and they were also irked by repeated instances of senior members of the attorney-general's department assuring them of one course of action and taking another.

Deputy Attorney-General David Vickers promised to get back to him in a week or so after the brief, Banson said. That has stretched to almost a month and Branson said he can't reach Vickers.

'TWAS A BIG BLAST

Cause of the explosion, police said, was diesel oil being thrown on a bonfire of crates and boxes being burned on property of Vantreight Farms.

Gems Not Such Great Buys

A number of Victoria-area residents and businessmen are believed to have lost money through buying diamonds from two Toronto firms whose officials have been charged with fraud.

Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall said Friday London House Bullion and Diamond Dealers, and Merchant Diamond Group Ltd., are known to have solicited here.

The majority of the calls were made to Victoria businessmen.

He said the two are among several eastern Canadian firms that staged a telephone campaign offering diamonds for sale as an investment.

Tindall said in the past year the bureau received more than 100 reports of such calls.

"Based on that, I'd imagine there are a substantial number of people in Lower Vancouver Island who took the firms up on their offer," Tindall said.

Last September the Vancouver BBB warned the public to be cautious in dealing with London House and Merchant Diamond Group following reports the firms were appraising the diamonds considerately above the market value.

The BBB cited one example of a person who bought a package of diamonds from Merchant Diamond Group for $1,450 after being told the appraised value was $1,795.

Tindall said several other firms have been operating here as well.

Tindall said the man paid $6,000 for a package of diamonds which the firm appraised at about $8,000. But a local expert said the gems were worth only $700.

Tindall said the firms contacted persons here directly by phone from Toronto and Montreal.

But, Tindall said, some firms misrepresented the investment potential, by saying diamonds were appreciating at the rate of 40 per cent a year. In actual fact, he said, the appreciation is about 10 per cent.

Orders had to be pre-paid but there was no problem about delivery, Tindall said.

Tindall said the firms indicated in their' advertisements that the appraised value they set on the gems was for insurance purposes only, and bore no relationship to actual market value.

The charges against the officials of London House and Merchant Diamond Group came after a lengthy RCMP investigation into the firms' activities.

Eleven Toronto men have been charged with conspiracy to defraud the public, defrauding the public and making use of the mails to defraud the public.

Tindall said anyone who has bought diamonds through mail order schemes should get a proper appraisal of the gems by a qualified gemnologist.

If there is wide discrepency, Tindall said, the person should contact RCMP.

River Project Safe for Fish

Greater Victoria Water Commissioner Ronald Upward has denied claims by conservationists that the planned diversion of Leech River into Sooke Lake will hurt salmon runs.

Upward said the diversion will be at a spot three miles upstream from Sooke just above a 15-foot waterfall.

"Very, very few fish would come this far upstream," he said.

Upward said every possible conservation angle will be looked into before any decision is made.

"You don't just barge in with a project anymore without getting expert advice on the possible detrimental effects," he said.

The diversion is planned to increase the water supply for the Greater Victoria area and is projected to cost $5 million.

It hasn't been decided yet whether to build a tunnel or pipeline but Upward suggests it will probably be the latter.

He said a five-mile long, 66-inch pipeline could be constructed in less than 12 months while a tunnel would take up to five years.
